353 District Selects Face Army Calls Feb. 19-24

Forms to Be Sent 2,000 to Assure Filling of Quota For Induction

Selective service registrants from the District numbering 353 are to take the Army's oath for a year's military training in the third induction February 19 to 24.

On the heels of the announcement yesterday by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Capital selection chief, the District's 25 local boards once more geared up their machinery to furnish sufficient candidates for the impending call.

On the basis of supplying five candidates for each selectee expected to qualify for service, approximately 2,000 Washington young men are to be sent questionnaires and to be classified in the near future.

Notification Today

Gen. Cox today will notify the local boards of the share of each in the 353 over-all District quota. His notification will take the form of a "warning order," but pointing out that the quota may be revised as estimates of available housing vary before induction.

Yesterday's figure was almost double that of the second contingent, and quadruple the number in the pioneer call, and reflects the ever-quickening tempo of selective service.

One step nearer, according to Third Corps Area reports, is the peak phase of the draft, expected in March, when thousands of peacetime defenders are to be sworn in weekly.

Although still far behind schedule, the "selective service picture is clearing up," officials said yesterday. They pointed out that it was the completion of increasing numbers of cantonments throughout the country that permitted the induction speedup.

Housing Delays

Housing delay has long been the No. 1 stumbling block of the selection program.

Meanwhile, speculation arose as to where the third contingent of Washington recruits will be sent on permanent assignment.

While this will depend on requisitions to be received at Third Corps Area headquarters from other Army sectors before the induction date, it was understood many of them will be assigned to Texas and Oklahoma camps, like their predecessors in the swearing-in of last week, where they will be housed in tents.

At the same time, Walter L. Perley, chief clerk of Local Board No. 3, announced Gen. Cox will speak at a meeting of the 25 chief clerks of selection boards January 23 at the Mayflower Hotel. The dinner is designed to iron out deferment policies.

Monday Another Day Elsewhere, But Holiday Here

Just another work day elsewhere, Inauguration Day will be a 100 per cent legal holiday here. Government offices, schools and banks will be closed Monday. Most, if not all of the larger downtown department stores will suspend business at least part of the day, it appeared yesterday.

Many school children, who can secure their parents' written permission, will be selling inaugural programs.

In Montgomery County, county employes who can be spared will get the day off.

Inaugural Editions

Sunday's Post will be packed with interesting stories and pictures about the inauguration, including 8 picture pages in rotogravure.

Monday's Post will bring you news of the day's program.

Tuesday's Post will record exactly what happened. Get all three—mail them to your friends. Phone NAtional 4200 to place your order.

Witness Tells How Carrier Fought Stukas for 7 Hours

Scarred Illustrious Limps Into Port, Still Pursued by Bombers; Storm of Steel Swept Decks but Crew Kept Guns Going

By Larry Allen.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Aboard Aircraft Carrier Illustrious, With British Mediterranean Fleet, Jan. 15.—This scarred aircraft carrier, attacked for 7 hours on January 10 by German dive bombers, came into a Mediterranean port under her own power today.

Forty to 50 Nazi planes, making the heaviest attack upon a single British warship of this war, flung torpedoes at the Illustrious' sides and 100,000 pounds of high explosive bombs at her flight deck in an unsuccessful attempt to put this newest of Britain's carriers under water.

The German pilots, diving headon, plunged into a great wall of gunfire; they spattered the decks with machine gun bullets and dropped scores of bombs on either side of the Illustrious.

Seven hours of this violent assault ended at dark.

Bugle Sounds the Call to Action

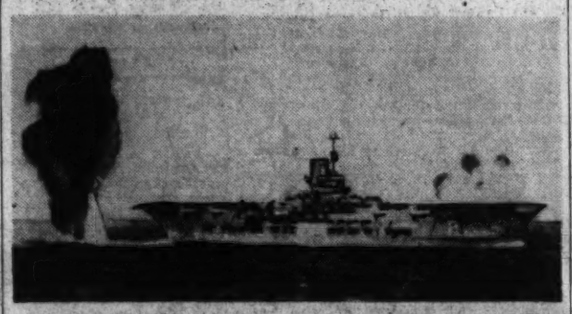
The German pilots dived so low that the markings could be easily seen on their big Junkers planes. They dropped bombs all around the deck. Bomb splinters flew about the bridge and the rest of the carrier like hailstones; near misses so shook her that it seemed they would hurl her over on her side.

The Germans attacked while the Illustrious and units of the British Mediterranean fleet were escorting a big east-bound convoy, and after a British cruiser had sunk the 642-ton Italian Destroyer Vega.

At 12:30 on January 10 the marine bugler sounded the warning and a voice over the loudspeaker system called out:

"All hands to action stations."

I reached the bridge just as a big German bomb struck the ship. There was a shattering blast. Almost simultaneously a 1,000-pound



A bomb falls dangerously near the British Aircraft Carrier Ark Royal in an attack similiar—but not so merciless—as the German raid on the Illustrious bomb crashed alongside and a blinding flash seemed to envelop the vessel.

(The British announced in London that the Illustrious, the 9,100-ton Cruiser Southampton and the 1,335-ton Destroyer Gallant had been damaged, and that at least 12 of the attacking planes were shot down.)

One officer put it this way:

"It was the most tremendous, terrifying thing I have ever seen. It seemed like all the fires of hell had been kindled. A blast of a 1,000-pound bomb is so crushing, so incredible, that there are no words to describe it."

The first bomb fell almost at the moment British fighter planes had taken off to engage the Germans.

Another bomb tore holes in the carrier's side. Still another crashed and fragments from a near miss struck a gun crew at a pompom station. They stood up unflinchingly to face the German machine-gun fire and pumped shells as fast as they could into the bombers.

Able to Get Few Fighters Into Air

Every gun on the Illustrious roared at the Germans but they kept diving in, bombs and torpedoes narrowly missing the carrier.

British battleships, cruisers and destroyers attacked both German and Italian bombers. Huge splashes from near misses helped to hide the ships from the bombers.

The entire crew of the Illustrious, except the officers on the bridge and crew firing the pompoms—(multibarreled antiaircraft guns)—gathered to help their wounded companions and carried them across the fight deck to medical stations under direct fire of machine guns and bombs.

As soon as a few seriously wounded mechanics were pulled out of the wreckage their comrades dashed in to get others.

The few fighter planes which the Illustrious was able to get into the air before the first bombs struck forced the Germans off temporarily, but that short respite was the only break in the attack in the whole afternoon; less than an hour later the Nazis returned to drop more bombs.

Again there was the deadly vibrating drone of bombers; again flame erupted in sheets from all the carrier's guns until, with smoke hanging over her flight deck, she looked like a moving monster of fire. Bombs fell to port and starboard; at bow and stern.

Another bomb crashed, causing casualties—including one R. A. F. officer who had come to sea, as he termed it, "just for a week's rest."

Windows in the entrance to the captain's glass-enclosed bridge were shattered by bomb blasts and the explosions of the ship's guns. A dive bomber swooped just in front of the bridge on the starboard side; a bomb threw a column of water over the bridge and the blast blew me down the hatchway to aviation intelligence quarters one deck below. A sheet of fire burned my face.

Bomb Creases Side of Vessel

Another German dived headon for the carrier. The bomb creased the side of the carrier.

"We are hit," mumbled an officer, his face pressed against the deck floor.

Between 2 p. m. and 7:30 there never were more than a few minutes free of the sound of projectiles crashing about the Illustrious, her guncrews flinging shells on and on at the attacking planes in the face of machine-gun fire.

Just before dusk small columns of smoke poured from the flight deck. Shell casings and bomb splinters formed a strange carpet there.

In the engine room the men kept the Illustrious going steadily on eastward to the nearest Mediterranean port. When that port was near the German torpedo bombers dived again.

Rear Admiral A. L. St. George Lyster watched the Germans dive in and shouted orders to his aide while shrapnel and machine-gun bullets peppered about him. On the bridge below Capt. Dennis Boyd puffed his pipe and again ordered:

"All hands to action stations."

Three Germans dived in and dropped torpedoes; a moment before, the captain had ordered full speed, and the torpedoes cut harmlessly through the water a few feet off the stern.

During all the struggle by the Illustrious, the British planes which had taken off her decks had made the Germans pay.

The final score in Nazi planes shot down was 12.

Soon after the Illustrious reached port fire squads extinguished a small fire in her interior while shipwrights plugged the bomb holes, getting her ready to go to sea again.

The dead on the Illustrious were taken out for burial at sea in the areas where they had fought. The wounded were sent to shore hospitals.

Even in port, German and Italian planes have tried to sink the Illustrious. They have found her guns still firing.

Growing Sea Power

The House Naval Committee yesterday agreed upon a new $1,209,000,000 naval authorization program to speed up shipbuilding, bolster warships against air attack, and add 400 ships to the fleet.

In an all-day session, the group voted to report a $300,000,000 bill providing additional protection against dive bombers, by adding "blisters" (steel shields), and antiaircraft guns to 60 battleships, cruisers and aircraft carriers.

280 "Urgently Needed"

It then completed hearings on and tentatively approved a $509,000,000 measure to expand shipbuilding and ordnance production facilities, and agreed upon an amendment authorizing 400 additional submarine chasers, torpedo boats and other auxiliary ships to cost $400,000,000. Formal approval of the bill was delayed until this morning to permit attaches to redraft certain legalistic phraseology.

Rear Admiral Samuel E. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, presented the 400-ship program to the committee and said that 280 of them were "urgently needed." Funds for this number will be asked in a supplemental appropriation bill within a few days, he stated.

Among the ships wanted immediately are 36 sea-going "escort ships," which could be used to convoy merchant ships to Europe. Most of the 280 smaller war vessels will be built at shipyards on the Great Lakes and can be completed within a year, Robinson declared.

Pom-Poms to Be Added

Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, chief of naval ordnance, told the committee the additional ordnance facilities are needed because the Navy Department wants to build the two-ocean Navy "a great deal quicker" than was contemplated last spring, and because plants for turning out guns for merchant ships must be built now.

"Are you getting ready to arm privately owned merchant ships?" asked Representative Cole (Republican), of New York.

"Yes," replied Furlong after a moment's hesitation.

Lack of Dollars Cutting British Orders to Trickle, Morgenthau Tells Lend-Lease Hearing

England's Liquid Assets Spent Or Pledged, Secretary Reports; Hull Urges U. S. Forget Treaties And Follow Law of Self-Defense

(Text of Secretary Hull's Statement, Page 17.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau disclosed yesterday that Great Britain has reached the point where she has "practically stopped" buying war supplies in the United States because of lack of dollars.

Testifying before a somewhat astonished House Foreign Affairs Committee in the first day's hearing on the aid-to-the-Allies bill, Morgenthau said that he was satisfied that Britain could pay for the planes and other supplies she already has ordered.

"But," he added, "when it comes to paying with dollars for what they still need, they simply haven't got it."

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, the first witness, warned the committee that it was "idle" for the United States to rely on The Hague rules of neutrality when "outlaw" countries like Germany, Italy and Japan were amok in the world.

The United States, he said, would have to rely on an older law—the law of self-defense. And in line with this, he said this country was amply warranted in giving aid to Britain and other countries that are trying to stem the "tidal wave of conquest."

The white-haired No. 1 Cabinet officer made this declaration in defending that part of the bill under which the United States would repair and fit out British warships in American ports—ordinarily a violation of The Hague Convention of 1907.

The hearing was enlivened by Representative George H. Tinkham, bearded Republican, of Massachusetts, who charged Hull with being "evasive" and tried unsuccessfully to have Morgenthau say that Britain ought to make use of her world wealth to buy supplies here.

"Closely Guarded" Figures

Secretary Morgenthau gave the committee hitherto "closely guarded" figures of the British Treasury in describing Britain's financial condition. When members expressed astonishment—they were particularly taken aback to learn that Britain no longer has any of her own gold at home—Morgenthau observed that the British people also probably would be surprised.

Secretary Morgenthau said that Britain already had paid out $1,337,000,000 for United States supplies. She is paying out or will pay out, he said another sum of $1,393,000,000.

To meet these payments, Morgenthau said, Great Britain has in the United States gold, balances, securities and investments amounting to $1,775,000,000.

Has Assets Elsewhere

The better part of these assets, he said, would be needed to pay for what already has been ordered by the British. Thereafter, he said, buying by the British Purchasing Commission will "come to a standstill."

"The buying has practically stopped," Morgenthau said, "because the money wasn't in sight."

What had led most Americans to over-estimate Britain's ability to buy in the United States, Mr. Morgenthau said, was a confusion growing out of Britain's dollar assets and her pound sterling assets.

He gave the committee figures showing that Britain's long-term investments outside of the United States, that is, in the dominions and in Latin America and other parts of the world, totaled £3,868,000,000.

Big-Game Hunter Tinkham And Hull Trade Verbal Shots

By the Associated Press

The fur flew and the audience roared yesterday when Secretary Hull, rangy mountain man from Tennessee, traded verbal punches with Representative Tinkham, bearded Bostonian and big game hunter, on the question of aid to Britain.

Tinkham, whose twin delights are hunting lions in darkest Africa and twisting the British lion's tail, inquired at a House hearing whether the pending lend-lease bill would permit the United States to give away any of its Navy.

HULL

TINKHAM

"That's so violent an assumption that I'm surprised that even you would mention it," Hull replied.

"We are in the days when the most violent assumptions are likely to be correct assumptions." Tinkham remarked.

At one point in the exchange, Tinkham referred to State Department "secrecy."

"My door has been open for the last eight years and you have never darkened it in quest of information," Hull commented quietly, while the audience laughed and Tinkham said "humpff."

The Congressman, after taking his glasses off and putting them back on, conceded that he had obtained some information from the department at various times which had caused him to be "disturbed."

"Frankly, I thought you wanted to be disturbed when I sent you the information," said Hull, poker-faced.

Sleet and Rain Again on Tap

Rain and subfreezing temperatures, the same combination that sheathed streets and cars with ice yesterday and caused hundreds of minor collisions, are expected here again today.

The Weather Bureau reported last night that the freezing rain is expected in the early hours this morning, but that warmer temperatures should help remedy the situation by afternoon.

Highest temperature expected today is 36 degrees and lowest, 28. Highest yesterday was 31 at 12:30 p. m., and lowest, 28 at 6:30 p. m.

Although the temperature yesterday remained below freezing the entire day there will be no skating on outdoor pools in the near future. Park Police reported that ice on the Reflecting Pool, which Tuesday was 1½ inches thick, has become mushy.

Freezing rains in the Middle West and Northeastern States were reported by United Press, and highway travel was said to be hazardous.

Light snow that fell in New York and Pennsylvania turned into freezing rain. Sleet and cold rain was said to be in prospect for most of the Atlantic Coast States.

Four Anacostia Schools Sought

Public school problems of "extreme urgency" are arising in Anacostia where school facilities are not keeping pace with Federal and private housing projects, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools, warned the Board of Education yesterday.

It was urged that the board request the Commissioners to ask Congress for certain deficiency appropriations "for immediate action" on the construction of four elementary schools in the Southeast.

One of the most acute conditions exists in the vicinity of the Congress Heights School. Near the school, between Bolling Field and the Naval Research Laboratory, the Navy Department is constructing units for 800 families to be occupied before summer in connection with national defense work. Authorities estimate that 900 children of school age will occupy the homes.

A large tract is also being opened by a real estate operator at Nichols Avenue and Chesapeake Street where 125 family units will be erected by September.

Purchase of land and construction of a 16-room elementary school and a combination auditorium-gymnasium was recommended for the vicinity of Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Street Southeast.

In the vicinity of the Benning School a total of 1,492 housing units are being developed. An eight-room addition and combination assembly hall-gymnasium for the school was requested.

A similar addition to the Randle-Highlands-Orr School was urged to meet the needs of 500 new families expected by next fall.

Purchase of a site and construction of a school at Forty-fourth Street and Alabama Avenue Southeast also was recommended.

A large-scale and determined venture into the field of "preclusive buying"—purchasing strategic metals, minerals, chemicals and other commodities in this hemisphere to prevent their falling into Axis hands—is under development in at least half a dozen Federal defense agencies, it was learned yesterday.

It is believed that intensified buying in Central and South American markets will get under way in the immediate future as a first step in a campaign of economic warfare to supplement the British blockade.

Indications that this program may be closely linked with the British ministry of economic warfare were seen yesterday in word that Britain was reportedly making "friendly inquiries" here about increased exports from the United States to Russia which might possibly be trans-shipped to Germany.

Britain Names Second Minister To United States

London, Jan. 15 (AP).—In a move that makes diplomatic history, Great Britain has named Sir Gerald Campbell, British high commissioner to Canada, as a second minister to the United States.

The British foreign office less than a week ago confirmed the elevation of Sir Nevile Butler, counselor of the embassy at Washington, to the rank of minister.

Informed sources here said that Sir Gerald would act as second in rank to the new ambassador, Viscount Halifax.

Sir Gerald acquired wide popularity and a broad knowledge of United States during his service as British consul general in San Francisco and New York, prior to 1938.

The year's first sledding fatality was chalked up in the District area yesterday, and icy streets caused scores of minor traffic accidents and at least two narrow escapes from death or serious injury.

Harold E. Stewart, colored, 9, of Emory Grove, Md., was killed near his home when his sled was struck by an automobile. Montgomery County police said the vehicle was operated by James M. Gartner, 23, of Gaithersburg, against whom they placed no charge.

A station wagon carrying 15 schoolboys home from the Peter Pan School, 801 Fern Place Northwest, collided with another car and overturned at Eighth and Underwood Streets Northwest, but none was injured seriously. The boys, from 3 to 12 years old, were shaken up and three were taken to Walter Reed Hospital and examined. They required no treatment.

Courts Called 'Weakest Link' In Safety Efforts

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

The Police Court judges were taken to task severely yesterday by Acting Chairman Schulte, of the House District Committee, who accused them of failing to cooperate in local traffic safety efforts. He will call them to a conference with other Congressional leaders Wednesday.

Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, long a volunteer leader in efforts to "drive death from the streets of the Nation's Capital," in strong terms branded the judges as the "weakest link" in Washington's traffic control setup.

Judges Decline Comment

Informed of Schulte's accusations, the four Police Court judges declined comment last night. Presiding Judge John P. McMahon expressed the sentiments of his associates by explaining he preferred to wait until next week's scheduled meeting to make any public statement. The jurists all said they had not been officially notified of the conference.

The charges were made at a hastily arranged meeting in Schulte's

Tragedy Visits Twice

D. C. Woman Fatally Burned As 2 Boys Struggle to Save Her

Mrs. Mary Crist, 68, was fatally burned at 6 o'clock last night when her clothing caught fire as she was preparing dinner for three children of a Metropolitan Police private who was in Bridgewater, Va., with his wife to attend the funeral of his mother.

The tragedy occurred in the home of the policeman, Frank Jordan, of the First Precinct, at 1524 S Street Southeast.

Joseph Jordan

Robert Peck

Jordan's eldest child, Joseph, 11, tried to assist his grandmother. A neighbor, Robert Peck, 17, of 1521 S Street Southeast, suffered minor burns on the hands and arms in beating the flames from Mrs. Crist's clothing.

How Mrs. Crist's clothing ignited was not known as she was in the kitchen alone at the time. Joseph said he and the younger children, Nancy, 4, and Jimmy, 1, were in the living room playing when she ran screaming through the room, her clothing a mass of flames. Joseph ran to her in a gesture at rescue.

Mrs. Crist, still screaming, ran onto the front porch. Peck looked up from repairing his automobile in front of his home and, he said, saw flames leaping from Mrs. Crist "6 feet high."

Peck dashed to the stricken woman. With his hands he tore at the flaming clothing. He took off his mackinaw and beat the fire out. Neighbors called police and an ambulance. Casualty Hospital attendants said Mrs. Crist was severely burned over most of her body.

Britain Running Out of Dollars, Morgenthau Says something over $15,000,000,000.

Representative Tinkham asked Morgenthau why this wealth could not be segregated and used as collateral for the war supplies the United States is going to "lend or lease" under the bill.

Secretary Morgenthau pointed out some of the difficulties, including exchange, but in the end asked to be excused from expressing an opinion.

The hearings on H. R. 1776—described by Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, as "the most important bill ever to come before Congress"—opened in the big chamber of the House and Ways Committee.

Klieg lights gave the room a garish glow as Secretary Hull took his place before the 24 members of the Foreign Affairs Committee turned out for the momentous session.

Sketches Background

In a low voice, almost drowned out by the whir of the newsreel cameras, he began by reading a formal statement. This sketched the events leading up to the present war, starting with Japan's march into Manchuria. Turning to Europe, he recalled Italy's invasion of Ethiopia, her seizure of Albania, her entry into the European war on the side of Germany, and finally her unprovoked attack on Greece.

He told how Hitler and his associates, from the time they came to power in 1933, began to arm "feverishly" and to improve Germany's strategic position by skillful diplomacy. Then he recalled the series of broken promises, the absorption of Austria, the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia and the "brutal attack" on Poland.

Mankind today, Hull said, is face to face, not with regional wars or isolated conflicts, but with an organized, ruthless and implacable movement of steadily advancing conquest. He continued:

"We are in the presence of forces which are not restrained by considerations of law or principles of morality; which have fixed no limits for their program of conquest; which have spread over large areas on land and are desperately struggling now to seize control of the oceans as an essential means of achieving and maintaining their conquest of the other continents."

A Peril for America

Should Germany, Italy and Japan gain control of the high seas, he said, the danger to the United States would be multiplied many fold.

He said the three powers had repudiated in every essential the principles of peaceful and orderly international relations.

"The most scrupulous observance of peaceful countries of legal concepts provides today no security whatever," Mr. Hull said. "Many nations which trusted to the integrity of their intentions and the care with which they observed their legal obligations have been destroyed."

Representative Luth A. Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, asked Secretary Hull about that provision of the bill which would permit the repair of belligerent ships in American ports. Was this, he asked, a violation of the Hague treaty.

Secretary Hull produced a memorandum which quoted sections of the Hague treaty. One of these held that belligerent warships stopping in neutral ports might only get such repairs as would make them seaworthy and could not increase their supplies of war material or their armament.

The Secretary said that Great Britain and Italy were not parties to the Hague Treaty, but his real answer to Representative Johnson was as follows:

"We are not here dealing with an ordinary war situation. Rather, we are confronted by a situation that is extraordinary in character."

Germany and Italy, he said, had paid no attention to the provisions of the Hague treaty or to any other element of international law. Germany, he said, had solemnly assured Denmark and Norway that their territory would be respected, but had invaded them nevertheless.

Matter of Self-Defense

"Then you think," said Representative Johnson, "that we must take a practical view of self-defense?"

"Yes," said Hull, "if we have learned anything from these little countries that have been swallowed up and are now under the heel of a conqueror."

"If a house is afire," he said, "there is not much gain in talking about how much water shall be drawn from the well."

Representative Fish reminded Hull that the United States had a navy six times larger than that of Germany.

"If I were a conquering nation," Hull said, "I would make control of the seas my supreme objective because I couldn't hold the land if somebody else controlled the seas."

Representative Tinkham read a newspaper clipping which said that the pending bill would give President Roosevelt "the power to make war or to do anything."

"There were people reading such statements in Belgium and Holland," Hull observed drily, "and they are now on the chain gang."

Tinkham later accused Hull of being "evasive," and he also clashed with Morgenthau. When Morgenthau said he was willing to leave certain matters to President Roosevelt, Tinkham said:

"I am sorry to say that I don't have the same confidence in the President as you do."

"And if you don't mind my saying so," said Morgenthau, laughing, "that's why you are in the minority."

Mexico City, Jan. 15.—Police announced today that large quantities of leaflets urging street railway workers to strike were found in the offices of Adolfo Leon Osorio, arrested yesterday on a charge of being the head of a gang whose specialty it was to disturb the performances of American films with an antitotalitarian slant.

This suggests that German agents are interested in stirring up labor trouble in Mexico.

British Assets Estimate Low, Officials Say

U. S. Economists Cite Federal Reserve Board Figures for Comparison

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Figures in the British "balance sheet" of dollar assets, presented to Congress yesterday by Secretary Morgenthau, are markedly different from figures prepared by other Government departments, officials pointed out last night.

Citing estimates of the Commerce Department and the Federal Reserve Board, Government economists said that the tables presented by Morgenthau showed totals that were extremely low.

The Treasury Secretary told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that Britain has total dollar exchange assets of $1,775,000,000, while their requirements in 1941 to pay for war purchases would be $3,019,000,000.

According to Morgenthau's figures, the British Empire will show a total dollar deficit at the end of this year of $1,464,000,000.

When compared with figures released last week by the Federal Reserve Board, the Morgenthau "balance sheet" appears to omit many items that other officials say could be classed as British resources.

Morgenthau's Table

The following is Morgenthau's table of the United Kingdom's available dollar exchange assets on January 1, 1941:

	(In millions)
Gold in U. S. or en route.....	$205
Official dollar balances.....	54
American securities (Jan. 6)..	616
Total liquid assets	$875
Direct and other investments.	900
Total dollar exchange assets.	$1,775

The statement noted that the British government has $33,000,000 in gold scattered in various parts of the world, mostly, however, in areas from which is cannot be shipped here "quickly or safely."

The table also noted that British banks, private persons and corporations have balances in the United States of $305,000,000, not shown above. The statement said in this connection:

"The British government feels that these balances are at the minimum level necessary for the continued conduct of business and are therefore not available for use by the British government."

These figures contrasted with an estimate by the Federal Reserve Board last week that the British have, roughly, $7,000,000,000.

Reserve Board's Estimates

The Reserve Board included many more items in its estimates and set higher values on many of the items carried in both the Morgenthau and the Reserve Board totals.

Estimating that the British Empire had gold and dollar resources of every sort at the outbreak of the war amounting to $7,000,000,000, the Reserve Board said in the intervening period the empire had produced $1,100,000,000 in gold and sold $1,400,000,000 worth of goods to the United States. While acquiring this additional wealth, the British paid out $2,600,000,000 for goods already delivered by the United States and for withdrawing capital from England and for other purposes.

The board printed a table in the January issue of its bulletin which, for instance, included the fact that Great Britain's central gold reserves were $2,000,000,000 when the war started. This was not shown in the Morgenthau table.

Higher Dollar Balances Given

Dollar balances, according to the board, were $595,000,000, while Morgenthau showed them as "official" balances totaling $54,000,000 and private balances totaling $305,000,000.

The board table showed total resources in gold and dollars of the United Kingdom as $4,860,000,000. Canada, $1,570,000,000, and the rest of the British Empire, $685,000,000. Thus, the total shown for the British Empire was $7,115,000,000.

The Morgenthau table was confined to the United Kingdom, while the Reserve Board covered all of the British Empire.

Along with the "balance sheet" of British assets, Morgenthau released estimates of long-term investments of the United Kingdom outside this country.

The total shown, by nominal value, was £3,868,000,000. The largest share was invested in the British Empire, amounting to £2,233,000,000, of which half was invested in government securities.

Gold Production Omitted

The next largest share was £1,002,000,000 in Latin America, more than a third of it in railways, mainly Argentine railways. The Asiatic investment of the British was shown as £308,000,000, two-thirds of it in China. Investments in Europe were $250,000,000 and in other areas £75,000,000.

The figures were based on a number of studies, most of which were made by British economists before the war began.

Officials who commented yesterday on the Morgenthau figures, apparently prepared for him by Frederick Phillips, Undersecretary of the British treasury, expressed surprise that the Treasury Secretary made no mention of annual British gold production as a potential British asset.

In another statement that he handed out simultaneously, Morgenthau estimated that during 1941 Australia would export $75,000,000 in gold to the United States and South Africa, $480,000,000. Their annual production of the yellow metal is even higher than those amounts.

First Defense 'A. E. F.' Sails For Newfoundland Base

Strict Military Secrecy Surrounds Departure From New York; Army Refuses to Reveal Identity of Units

By W. W. Chaplin
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 15.—The first American Defense Expeditionary Force to be assigned to foreign service since the present European war began sailed today for Newfoundland to occupy the northernmost anti-invasion base obtained from Great Britain in exchange for United States destroyers.

The Army force, clad in heavy uniforms against the ice and snow of the frozen North, trooped up the gangplanks of the transport liner Edmund B. Alexander.

The Defense Expeditionary Force, Army officials said, will reach St. Johns, N. F., in five days.

The embarkation was conducted amid all the trappings of wartime secrecy at the Army base in Brooklyn, which was closed to everyone without special credentials. News pictures were allowed, but only under strict supervision, and newsreels had to pass through War Department censorship before release.

Mishap Delays Sailing

The War Department "requested" that no information be printed concerning the number of troops leaving for Newfoundland or the number or type of units comprising the force "in the best interests of national defense." The troops will be used to help organize and man the new air and naval base being established on Newfoundland.

Sailing of the troop ship was delayed an hour because it smashed into the pier in getting away, breaking six portholes and scraping off large areas of paint. Twelve tugboats were summoned to aid in the final departure.

It was indicated that soldiers would use the transport as their barracks in Newfoundland until quarters ashore could be provided.

Pictures Carefully Staged

The pictures permitted at the sailing showed the men with knapsacks and rifles slung on their backs and cartridge belts outside their overcoats, but all were turned toward the cameras in such a fashion that their shoulder division insignia was hidden.

The Army declined even to permit announcement whether the men were Regulars, National Guardsmen or selectives, or whether some companies were in one category and others in another, to make a "representative" force.

The soldiers of the defense expedition wore neither the old campaign hat nor barracks cap of home service, nor the jaunty overseas cap of World War foreign service, but a heavy cap with flaps to pull down and cover the entire head, except the face, against the cold winds of the Newfoundland winter.

House Unit Seeks 400 More Warships

tection, to be installed on existing major ships at a cost of $3,000,000 each, consists of (1) adding more 3-inch guns from reserve stocks immediately and replacing them later with new 5-inch, 38-caliber guns that have an effective range of 31,000 feet and which are just getting into large scale production; (2) providing thin steel shields around anti-aircraft guns and signal posts; (3) installing new, improved antiaircraft height directors; (4) adding large numbers of 1.1-inch "pom-pom" guns for use against dive bombers.

The latter, built here at the Navy Yard, are four-barreled weapons that fire 500 2-pound explosive shells a minute to an effective range of 16,000 feet. British experience and tests conducted over here with radio-controlled "drones" have proved the "pompoms" highly effective against bomb divers, Admiral Furlong said. Quantity production of the new weapon will begin in April, he said.

Under questioning by Chairman Vinson, Admiral Robinson disclosed that the present and projected Navy will include 1,898 ships of all types. In service are 322 warships, 173 mine-layers, tankers and other auxiliaries, and 160 patrol and district craft, a total of 655. Building are 369 warships, 85 auxiliaries, 98 patrol boats and 166 district vessels (small mine-sweepers, tugs, etc.), totaling 716. In addition, 127 merchant vessels are now being converted to various naval use.

Admiral Robinson said the Navy had taken over 52 trawlers, virtually all of the New England fishing fleet, and was converting them into mine-sweepers.

"We might be faced any moment with having to keep these harbors swept," he explained.

The Navy official said that very few additional merchant ships could be taken over, without "seriously injuring" that vital industry. Many more would be needed in time of war, he added.

In asking for the additional 400 ships, Robinson said that the first 280 that the Navy wanted immediately tentatively included 66 submarine chasers and "escort ships," 24 torpedo boats and 190 minesweepers. In time of war, he said, the number of such ships required probably would "run in almost astronomical numbers."

Admiral Furlong said that the additional antiaircraft guns to be installed on major vessels of the fleet would double existing batteries on cruisers, and increase such weapons on battleships by 50 per cent. Aircraft carriers will receive only "pompoms."

Admiral Furlong said that recent tests at the naval proving ground down the Potomac at Dahlgren, with all types of aerial bombs, had shown that they could crack and bulge but not pierce battleship deck armor.

"Direct hits with bombs can sink cruisers and lighter ships," he declared, "but it would take quite a number of bombs, three or four torpedoes and several gun hits to sink a battleship."

British Soldier Disobeys Order and Gets Medal

London, Jan. 15.—Gunner Alfred E. Bennett, who disobeyed an army regulation and shot down a Nazi raider, has been awarded the military medal.

Bennett was left in charge of an antiaircraft gun. Regulations forbid the firing of a gun unless ordered by a superior officer, but when a German plane appeared within easy reach, Bennett fired. The raider crashed.

Copper, Zinc Shortages Are Predicted

Production of Arms Outstripping Supply, Says C. D. Dallas

Copper and zinc yesterday appeared to be displacing aluminum as the metals whose supply shortage may prove most critical to the national defense program.

Assurances on the one hand that the aluminum industry would be geared to meet peak aviation demands were coupled on the other by word that supplies of copper and zinc were insufficient to meet present demands.

C. Donald Dallas, president of Revere Copper & Brass, Inc., said yesterday in New York City, that at the present capacity of his company, working six days a week on three shifts, he was faced with a shortage of materials.

"Substantial increases in productive capacity now under way," he added, "will make this condition extremely serious."

Although domestic copper mines are operating at capacity, he said, stocks are being reduced by about 20,000 tons a month and at the present time there is practically no copper for sale.

A Defense Commission official, however, declined to take such a pessimistic view. He said he knew of recent sales offers by copper producers and that although the situation might grow tight, "the commission can handle the matter" so that vital requirements can be filled.

He admitted, however, a more serious condition relating to zinc. Lack of smelting and refining facilities contributed to the difficulty, he admitted. Settlement of a current strike at a Mexican zinc smelter, however, will contribute materially to improving the situation, he said.

Although Dallas criticized the recent Federal deal to import 100,000 tons of Chilean copper as being insufficient, the defense official stated that if the need arose, arrangements could be made to bring in more.

The zinc situation is most acute, Dallas stated, because of bottlenecks, both in raw and refined grades necessary for the manufacture of cartridge brass and other alloys.

Shortages in aluminum, however, are not so serious as had been thought, it appeared from a statement here yesterday of an engineer of the Aluminum Co. of America. The engineer said that by December of this year the output of the company would meet the peak monthly production goal of 2,000 military planes a month. This peak in plane production, he noted, would not be reached until three or four months later, in April, 1942.

The engineer, who declined to be quoted by name, said that last year his company shipped twice the amount of aluminum forgings necessary for the planes produced in 1940. The unused remainder, he added, must be either in inventories or in processing.

Laid to Speculation

Leon Henderson, of the Defense Commission, attributed recent price increases in iridium to "sheer speculation" yesterday and said that "aspects of this situation undoubtedly would justify and may require the application of full Governmental powers."

The metal, used as a hardening agent for platinum in airplane engine parts, electrical equipment and jewelry, sold for $65 an ounce in 1939, Henderson said in a statement, but rose to $148 last November and to $300 or more in December.

Henderson reported that a study "indicates that . . . there is no real shortage of iridium."

Glass May Get Senate Foreign Relations Seat

Virginian and Byrnes Considered, to Bolster Lend-Lease Support

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Appointment of Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to reinforce the Administration's aid-to-England position was under consideration last night.

Glass may be named to the group along with Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, his close friend and equally stanch exponent of the President's foreign policy, it was learned.

The proposal still awaits the approval of the Senate Democratic Steering Committee, whose special Subcommittee has not filed its report.

The appointments, if approved, would bolster the Administration's majority for the lend-lease program on a group that now represents a strong segment of the isolationist opposition to the bill.

Are Democratic Vacancies

Glass and Byrnes would fill two Democratic vacancies created by the death of Senator Key Pittman, former chairman of the committee, and retirement of former Senator Schwellenbach. No Republican vacancies exist on the group.

The additions would make no sharp change in the committee's foreign policy alignment, as Pittman also was foursquare with the Administration. Schwellenbach went along with repeal of the arms embargo, but had strong noninterventionist views.

Senator Glass, who has differed with the New Deal philosophy on nearly every domestic front, is an enthusiastic supporter of President Roosevelt's foreign course.

The 83-year-old Virginian recently told The Post in an interview that he hopes the United States will never have to send its Army abroad "but I'm in favor of sending the Navy and shooting the devil out of the Axis powers."

Senator Byrnes from the outset has been one of the President's chief consultants on the lend-lease program.

Brings Leaders Together

Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Senator Pat Harrison, President Pro Tem of the Senate, already are members of the Foreign Relations Committee. Addition of Byrnes would bring the Senate's informal three-man leadership combination—Barkley, Byrnes and Harrison—once more into play in hurdling the bill's first Senate test.

The committee now has an apparent majority for the general objectives of the bill, but noninterventionist sentiment on the group is strongly entrenched. Such leading opponents of the bill as Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California; Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, are members of the committee. Others opposed to the bill on the group are Senator Nye, of North Dakota; Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota, and Senator Capper, of Kansas, Republicans. In addition there are one or two votes for "drastic modification."

Senator Clark's Wife Assails Aid Bill

Chicago, Jan. 15 (INS).—Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of the Senator from Missouri, declared today that President Roosevelt's foreign policy is leading the United States to "complete suicide" and that his British aid bill "asks the abdication of Congress—asks exactly the same powers that Europe's dictators asked and got."

"The logical conclusion of the present policy is war," she said. "We hold that you cannot stop on a hair-line any place you want."

Mrs. Clark, head of the Washington Chapter of the America First Committee, was in Chicago to attend committee sessions.

Stark Vetoes Vote Inquiry As 'Partisan'

Shocks Democrats By Demanding G. O. P. Share in Recount

By the Associated Press

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 15.—Missouri's outgoing Democratic Governor vetoed a legislative refusal to seat his Republican successor today in a surprise "farewell" message which shocked the assembly's Democratic majority into temporary silence and created still greater confusion in the muddled gubernatorial dispute.

Appearing before a hushed joint session, Gov. Lloyd C. Stark denounced what he termed "a partisan setup in this contest" of the right of Forrest C. Donnel to assume the Governorship.

Specifically he vetoed a resolution creating a ten-member legislative committee to "investigate" Donnell's 3,613-vote victory over Lawrence McDaniel, a St. Louis Democrat. The Democrats have a 6-to-4 edge on the committee.

"I cannot approve a resolution which provides for a partisan setup in this contest," Stark told the surprised legislators. "Any arrangement looking toward a recount of the ballots under the contest should be such an arrangement that both political parties would have fair and equal representation."

For nearly a half minute after Stark finished speaking there was not a sound in the crowded chamber. Then applause broke out on the Republican side as the Governor made his way slowly down the aisle.

Recovering from the first shock of the surprise action, Democratic leaders immediately questioned Stark's veto power. They said resolutions passed at joint sessions were no business of the Governor, and some indicated an effort might be made to ignore the veto.

But the Governor's message included statutory references to support his action. He said he would not approve any expenses of the investigating committee.

The legislative investigation, voted after a dramatic all-night session last week, gave the committee power to recount every ballot in the State if it desired. The contest grew out of Democratic charges of "fraud" in the November 5 election.

Lend-Lease Bill Opponents Map Battle Drive

Noninterventionists Planning to Carry Campaign to People

By Stanley Carroll
International News Service Staff Writer

Senate noninterventionists, at a series of conferences yesterday, mapped plans for an intensive campaign to "carry to the American people" their battle against President Roosevelt's "lend-lease" bill for all-out aid to nations fighting aggressors.

Outstanding developments included:

1. Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, announced he will go on a Nation-wide radio hookup "within a week" to "take the issue to the country."

2. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, charged President Roosevelt, in his recent "fireside chat" and address to Congress, "repudiated the peace plank" in the 1940 Democratic Party platform.

3. Senate G. O. P. noninterventionists agreed to have Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, lead the Senate Republicans opposing the "lend-lease" bill.

Johnson, who, with the late Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, led successful battles against United States entrance into the League of Nations and adherence to the World Court, is expected to tell the country the "lend-lease" bill challenges Congress to choose between "dictatorship or preservation of our present form of democratic government."

It will be the veteran statesman's first radio appearance since he went on the air during the recent election campaign to vigorously condemn Mr. Roosevelt's policies.

Wheeler, who declared the President "lost his temper" when Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference Tuesday that the Montanan's warning that the all-aid to Britain program would lead to war in which "one out of every four American boys will be plowed under," conferred throughout the day with Senate opponents of the bill.

Wheeler renewed his attack on the President in an interview.

Declaring "it was significant" that the President, when pledging he would not send an expeditionary force to Europe, "made no promise that he would not send battleships and planes, manned by Americans," the Montanan said:

"It should be remembered that Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants at the 1940 Democratic National Convention, including Vice President-Elect Wallace, fought the peace plank, both in the subcommittee and in the full committee.

"'Not until the closing days of the campaign, when the election seemed in some doubt, did the President take the platform to his bosom and, in a Philadelphia speech, said he was standing on that platform.

Wheeler charged that since the election the fireside chat and message to Congress repudiated the peace plank and that neither "could be construed otherwise than intended to inflame the public mind and frighten the people into believing this Nation was in danger of immediate attack and must give totalitarian powers to the President and accept a war program at this session of Congress."

Eaton Defense Plant Strike Is Settled

By the Associated Press

A two-day strike at five plants of the Eton Manufacturing Co., makers of airplane engine parts, was settled last night, but Federal conciliation efforts to prevent a threatened strike at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. plant in San Diego, Calif., made little headway.

Harry C. Malcom, Federal conciliator, reported that officials of the Ryan company and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers remained deadlocked on a wage dispute and said that arbitration would be sought if necessary to prevent a strike which the union negotiators have been authorized to call. The strike would tie up orders for $11,400,000 of military planes.

Settlement of the strike at the Eaton plants, in Michigan and Ohio, was announced at Detroit by James F. Dewey, Federal conciliator, following a conference of more than six hours with officials of the company and a C. I. O. union.

Dewey had demanded as a "defense measure" that the plants be reopened and differences settled later. He announced that all the plants would be opened as quickly as possible today.

Defense Sidelights

Dowding Has High Praise For Martin Medium Bomber

Baltimore, Jan. 15. (AP).—Praise for the quality of the new high-speed Martin B-26 medium bomber was expressed today by Sir Hugh Dowding former head of the British fighter command, who is making a survey of American plants.

DOWDING

"I was very much impressed," Dowding said after inspecting the heavily armed B-26 at the Glenn L. Martin plant.

The plane has a speed of about 350 miles an hour, and contracts totaling more than $100,000,000 have been placed by the U. S. Army for the bombers.

He described the bomber as "just about all right from a standpoint of speed, load and power" for European combat duty.

Asked how many British pilots were engaged in combat work with the R. A. F., Dowding said 500 to 1,000 were "on the line, day and night, ready to do the necessary fighting."

He said they were young men, from 19 to 24, adding, "there is no such thing as a conscript among them, in fact we have many more applications than there are places to be filled."

$157,181,400 Earmarked By WPA for Defense

The WPA has earmarked $157,181,400 for work on national defense projects since last July 1, acting Commissioner Howard O. Hunter announced yesterday.

Most of the money, divided among 116 projects, was allocated for construction and repairs at Army and Navy posts, and for development of strategically located civil airports.

Walling Reassures Subcontractors

Prospective subcontractors on defense jobs need not be deterred from undertaking the work through fear of the wage-and-hour provisions of the Walsh-Healey Act, it was intimated yestreday by L. Metcalfe Walling, director of the Labor Department division of public contracts.

Commenting on a recent statement of Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, before the House Naval Affairs Committee, Walling said that the Walsh-Healey Act, it was intimated yesterday tors as such. Towers had said that the law had interfered to a "minor extent" in placing certain contracts because subcontractors were reluctant to take part of the work since they did not desire to deal with the complex features of the law.

Walling said that in letting subcontracts, the prime contractor was obliged only to see that the work was done under safe and sanitary conditions.

Lord Wakefield Dies; Gave D. C. Statue of Burke

London, Jan. 15 (AP).—Viscount Wakefield, 81, noted philanthropist, died today in Beaconsfield, Buckinghamshire.

Lord Wakefield, who made his fortune in oil, was a patron of British enterprise in automobile and speedboat racing and civil aviation.

He sponsored many flights by Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, who recently died in the Thames Estuary in an air accident.

Lord Wakefield was widely known in the United States.

As head of the British Sulgrave delegation, Lord Wakefield presented statues of Burke, Pitt and Bryce to the American Cities of Washington, Pittsburgh and New York in 1922.

He held an honorary degree of doctor of laws from Colgate University.

Lord Wakefield leaves his wife, the former Sarah Frances Graham, whom he married in 1888. Since he died childless, the viscounty becomes extinct.

Navy Yards Being Placed On 6-Day Week

Adm. Yarnell Recalled To Duty to Recruit Engineering Students

Further stepping-up the production of arms and ships, the Navy Department is rapidly placing Navy Yards throughout the country on a 24-hour, three-shift schedule, with employes each working 48 hours weekly.

Secretary of the Navy Knox made the disclosure at a press conference at which these other developments were announced:

Joint Army, Navy and Marine Corps training maneuvers will be conducted in Puerto Rican waters, commencing January 21 and extending into February.

Rear Admiral H. E. Yarnell, U. S. N., retired, "trouble-shooting" former commander of the Asiatic Fleet, has been recalled to active duty to help mobilize several hundred students from engineering colleges for Navy duty.

Output Trebled Here

In discussing the labor speed-up, the Navy chief declared all of the Navy's shore establishments are being placed "as fast as we can" on a schedule of three eight-hour shifts with the exception of a minority that will operate in two shifts of ten hours. This 20-hour schedule is in effect at factories where four hours are necessary for machinery overhauling.

Notable example of the labor program is the Washington Navy Yard, Knox said, where production has been trebled and 10,000 employes have been added to the working force since he took office in July. A total of 13,300 workers are on duty there at present.

Navy Yard employes on a six-day, 48-hour week, are being paid overtime for the eight hours over the standard week.

The Navy Secretary said the hiring of thousands of specialized "craft" workers necessary for the three-shift labor program had been worked out in cooperation with the office of Labor Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman.

Coordination of Services

Participating in the joint training exercises, conducted annually to further coordinate effort between the services, will be selected Army units of the First Division, ships from the 125-vessel Atlantic Fleet, formerly known as the Patrol Force, and a part of the First Marine Brigade.

Brig. Gen. J. Garesche Ord will command the Army detachments, while Rear Admiral E. J. King and Brig. Gen. H. M. Smith, U. S. M. C., will head the Navy and Marine contingents.

Details of the maneuvers and exact number of troops involved were withheld. The joint training is similar to that held annually in the Caribbean and on the West Coast, it was stated.

Secretary Knox said Admiral Yarnell, who was kept in charge of the Asiatic Fleet for an extra tour of duty because of effective work in the Far Eastern trouble zone, will have "several jobs."

Students to Be Recruited

First of these, he said, will be to "sell" the engineering college seniors on the idea of joining technical branches of the Navy, where a great expansion of personnel is in progress.

Knox declared the students would be urged to join the service on patriotic grounds and in spite of the fact they could secure higher salaries in private engineering enterprises.

Seniors thus being inducted into service would be commissioned ensigns in the Naval Reserve while juniors would be appointed probationary ensigns, also in the Reserve, it was said.

In another defense move, Knox announced that all officers and enlisted men of Laboratory Research Unit No. 1 of the Naval Reserve had been assigned to active duty to conduct research into methods of improving influenza vaccine. The experiments will be at the University of California Medical School, Berkeley, Calif.

Ford Offers All-Out Aid In Emergency

Navy Service School Dedicated on Grounds Of River Rouge Plant

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Jan. 15.—Henry Ford told a nation-wide radio audience today that during the present crisis the Ford organization "wants to do everything possible to help America and the President."

The 77-year-old industrialist made the statement at the formal dedication of his new Navy service school in the grounds of the River Rouge plant, at Dearborn. The school, which is to train young naval recruits for technical and mechanical assignments with the fleet and at its bases, was accepted on behalf of the Navy by Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, representing Secretary Knox.

It was one of Ford's infrequent radio addresses. Flanked by a group of Naval officers, with some 200 enlisted men in the background, Ford stood in front of the school's administration building, his soft hat pulled tightly down on his head and his coat collar turned up against a biting wind, and said:

"During this crisis our organization wants to do everything possible to help America and the President. The Navy being our first line of defense, I feel that the training of these young men will vitally benefit our Nation. And, when this crisis is over we can then reclaim these mechanically trained young men in our industries."

In addition to the elder Ford and Rear Admiral Nimitz, Rear Admiral John Downes, commandant of the Ninth Naval District; Commander C. P. Cecil, executive officer of the naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill., and Edsel Ford spoke.

Commander Cecil referred to the school as "a boon to the Navy, especially in that it comes at a time when need for training is so paramount."

Through the establishment of the new school at Dearborn, he went on, "we have a start in educational work, a part of the national defense program, which we hope will be an example and incentive to other industrial leaders and bring similar advantages in other sections of the country."

Trainees at the school are to come from the enlisted personnel at the naval training stations at Great Lakes, Newport, R. I., and San Diego.

Names Selected For 7 Battleships

The Navy announced yesterday that President Roosevelt had approved the names of Illinois, Montana, Ohio, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine and New Hampshire for seven battleships of 45,000 tons or more, whose construction is getting under way.

Names also were assigned to seven new aircraft carriers—Franklin, Hancock, Randolph, Cabot, Bunker Hill, Oriskany and Ticonderoga. They were named for famous old Navy vessels, except the Bunker Hill, which will commemorate the battle of 1775.

Despots Seek to Destroy Capitalism, O'Mahoney Says

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee, declared yesterday that "the modern European despots" have embarked upon "a thoroughly planned and prepared effort to destroy both democratic government and the capitalistic system."

His statement was made at a session of the TNEC at which a "progress report" was presented by Dewey Anderson, TNEC's executive secretary. The committee has until April 3 of this year to make its final report and recommendations stemming from hearings held between December, 1938, and April, 1940.

Pointing out that his committee had been studying questions of economic organization which democratic leaders had thus far failed to answer, Senator O'Mahoney said: "The democracies have not in the past had the wit to use the facilities at our command in such a way as to provide economic stability and social justice for all the people."

Distribution of Goods

If there had been a more successful distribution of goods among the masses and a prevention of the growth of a dispossessed proletariat, "there never would have been such a thing as the rise of the totalitarian state," the Senator said.

In his "progress report," Anderson offered the committee a number of suggestions for dealing with the "concentration of economic power" characteristic of the national economy.

"Some leveling off of the income pyramid would result in the immediate betterment of the position of the lower third," said Anderson, "without depriving the country of any needed funds for investment."

Noting that one of the committee monographs concludes that "the overall tax system is regressive in its effect, and . . . does not contribute all it can to the solution of the problems of economy," the report indicates that "there is a large reservoir of untapped funds in the brackets from $5,000 to $50,000, and another in the brackets from $50,000 to $100,000." Furthermore, "it appears that the topmost brackets are not now being taxed at their point of highest return."

Business Aid Suggested

Removal of tax exemption on governmental securities is advocated and aid to small business suggested.

Further Government action on behalf of consumers is favored, and interstate trade barriers, patent grants, and advance planning in Government procurement procedures all are given attention.

Anderson asserted that the monographs and hearings of the TNEC "constitute the most comprehensive study of the national economy ever made in the United States."

Midnight Raid A Real Show For London

Thousands Watch Planes Weave Smoke Patterns in Sky

By the Associated Press

London, Thursday, Jan. 16.—London had a minor bedtime blitz air raid just before midnight and early today—the first air attack after dark since Sunday, but the show put on by the German bombers and challenging British night fighters surpassed any previous midnight performance over the capital.

Thousands poured into the streets to see the smoky vapor patterns woven upon the crystal clear heavens by the raiders and the darting, circling, machine-gunning fighters.

The raid began at an unusually late hour for attacks on London and the "all-clear" sounded in the early morning hours.

Another alarm two hours later was preceded by a series of heavy explosions.

One German raider was reported shot down in the London attacks.

Before London was attacked, raiding Nazi planes were in flight over other areas of England.

Three bombs were dropped at one midlands town, falling in a cemetery and recreation grounds and causing no casualties.

Two East Anglian towns reported raiders also.

London, Jan. 15 (INS).—The air ministry today released details of a daring raid Tuesday night through severe snow and electrical storms across the North Sea by American-made Hudson bombers of the Royal Air Force against the German air base at Forus, near the Norwegian port of Stavanger, and the Mandal airdrome at the entrance to the Skagerrak.

Flying "blind" while dangerous ice coated the wings of their sturdy planes, the British airmen reported they had scored direct hits on both airdromes, one bomb smashing a hangar at Mandal while others kindled fires in surrounding evergreen woods.

Bombs loosed from one Hudson registered two direct hits on a motorship off Stavanger and another raider hit a railroad bridge near that south Norwegian city, pilots related.

Attesting to their airworthiness, all the Hudsons negotiated the 600-mile round trip safely.

'We Are in War Now,' Says Gannett, Backs Roosevelt

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Frank E. Gannett, former aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination, declared tonight that "to all intents and purposes we are in the war now," and urged support for President Roosevelt.

Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., owner of several newspapers and often a critic of the Administration, told the Committee of One Hundred:

"Although I opposed Mr. Roosevelt and still do, I take my hat off to him for the way in which he has handled the job, and I hope we all will get behind him and support him."

Philadelphia, Jan. 15.—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, asserted here today that President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill for the aid of Great Britain "would bring an end to free government in the United States, and would abolish Congress, for all practical purposes."

War Drums Tell Ethiopians To Rise in Arms

By the Associated Press

On the Ethiopian-Sudanese Frontier, Jan. 15.—The rhythmic tomtom of 44 royal war drums has broken the desolate silence of this desert area with a summons to Ethiopian patriots to rise in arms against their Italian masters.

From peak to peak the thumping carried the message from former Emperor Haile Selassie last night, and today hundreds of Ethiopians slipped across the border to join their comrades assembling an army at Gojjam, near Lake Tana in northwestern Ethiopia.

The signal tells the natives the one-time Negus, "the King of Kings," is near and that the moment for armed revolt approaches.

Already native guerrilla raids have so harassed Italian posts, the British say, that only towns and main roads now are held by the Fascists and even these no longer are safe.

The British have trained and armed the Ethiopians for sniping duty and even for forays against military convoys and isolated desert posts.

As the remainder of the patriots learned the arts of modern war at Khartoum—even to handling tanks and airplanes—the Coptic Christian Church, through its patriarch at Cairo, declared its full support of Haile Selassie's attempt to regain his country and throne.

The former emperor, a devoted member of the church, recently was given apostolic blessings by the patriarch.

Italy Reported Rounding Up 'Defeatists'

5,000 Held as Political Prisoners at Trieste, Alone, Belgrade Hears

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 15.—Information reaching the Italo-Yugoslav frontier from Trieste said that Italian police have started wholesale political arrests in Trieste and Venice. More than 5,000 political prisoners are reported held in the Capo D'Istria Prison at Trieste.

Some of them are reported to be women and adolescents, while most of them are identified by Italian sources as Istrian-Slovene pacifists, "defeatists" and others suspected of sabotage and Communist activities and several hundred persons identified by Fascist sources as "Slovene irredentists," who have retained their language and cultural life since Istria came under Italian rule in 1919.

Italian workmen and prison laborers are constructing a huge concentration camp adjoining Capo d'Istria, according to frontier sources, to accommodate increasing shipments of Albanian insurgents, whose number is now said to be more than 2,000.

Italian sources said that the food shortage in northeastern Italy has reached the "calamitous" stage and that meat, butter, fat and eggs are completely unobtainable.

Olive oil is said to be also unobtainable, as are coffee, tea and cocoa. Illnesses from malnutrition are increasing, according to information from Italians who have crossed the frontier during the last two days. One kilogram of low-grade beef is now priced at 16 lire—about 75 cents on the official exchange.

Phillips Arrives in Rome

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Jan. 15.—The United States Ambassador to Italy, William Phillips arrived in Rome this afternoon to open a new and critical diplomatic phase in Italo-American relations. He brought no message, he said, and has no special mission, but his arrival is the most sensational development in the diplomatic field since Italy entered the war.

U. S. Buys to Cut Off Axis Supplies

British concern was said to center primarily on cotton exports. It was further intensified by reports that Russia contemplates formation of a 200-vessel merchant fleet to convey produce of the Americas to the Soviet Union, the Associated Press said.

The task of "plugging the Vladivostok leak," as well as other leaks in the British blockade and in the American export embargo program, is known to be troubling defense officials. Experts studying the problem admitted preclusive buying was being advocated as one of the most effective solutions, but they were unanimous in their reluctance to discuss details of a "delicate subject." Some immediate action on this line was intimated, however.

It was pointed out that some of the hemisphere buying by this country can be dovetailed with the Nation's own defense requirements. Increased purchases from South America and Central America of tin, nitrates, vanadium, copper and other metals are imminent, it is believed, both to enlarge the United States' own stock pile and to prevent the materials finding their way to German, Italian or Japanese destinations.

Recent purchases of Mexican mercury, however, reported made to block shipments to Japan, were said to be useful only to build American supplies. The Axis powers have ample sources of mercury in Spain and Italy, the world's largest producing areas, it was pointed out.

Government facilities to purchase strategic war materials are presently centered in the Army and Navy and the Treasury Procurement Division, all able to buy on direct Government order. The Metals Reserve Co., created last June with $5,000,000 of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds, is also in the market.

These agencies, the Departments of State and Commerce, the Bureau of Mines and several sections of the Defense Commission are all actively working on the subject.

Preclusive buying, as the foundation stone of an "all-out" campaign of economic warfare, according to one official, "would accomplish more in aid to Britain, at half the cost, than all the physical equipment we could send." Another pointed out that if the United States, the Nation nearest self-sufficiency, needs hundreds of different imports for defense needs, Germany must require many more varieties of imports. The Axis war effort could be "dried up" if these were stopped, he said.

Besides the Russian route, strategic raw materials are reaching Germany through the Balkans, Portugal and African ports, it is known. Some particularly necessary chemicals, important even in small quantities, are being carried to Axis powers by airplane.

U. S. Bombers Fly to Britain Between Breakfast and Tea

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 15.—United States-made bombers have achieved a breakfast-to-teatime schedule and set a new transatlantic record in delivery flights to England, it was disclosed today.

The prewar record for transatlantic flights between Newfoundland and the British Isles was set by the Cambrai, Imperial Airways flying boat, in September, 1937, when she flew from Botwood to Foynes, Ireland, in 10 hours and 33 minutes.

"That mark has been broken time and again," said an authoritative aviation source in partial disclosure of speed achieved in the ferrying which the British hope will bring hundreds of planes by midsummer.

This source would not, however, divulge the new record nor say who holds it.

(It is about 2,000 miles from Newfoundland to Britain, the shortest route from North America. Modern bombers, under favorable conditions, could fly that distance in well under 10 hours.)

Capt. Pat Eves, of British Airways, who was flying airplanes over India before the war, is one of the latest to achieve the breakfast-to-teatime schedule. Eves, 31, said he was bothered only by the "terrific cold."

It is understood that some of the machines—limited to long-range bombers—have been piloted by Americans and Canadians, all volunteers.

A school for training transatlantic pilots, it is understood authoritatively, has been opened in Canada. One of the most important phases of instruction is the take-off with heavy fuel loads.

The planes thus bein delivered are said to be Lockheed Hudsons, Boeing 17s, Lockheed Vega Venturas and Consolidated flying boats.

Air experts are talking of the possibility that the larger bombers might be loaded with wingless fuselages of small fighting planes for delivery to England. This has been done over shorter distances by Italians reinforcing their aviation in Africa.

Removal of Oil From Liner Begins

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 15 (U.P.).—The task of removing 1,000,000 gallons of fuel oil from the United States liner Manhattan began today, but maritime authorities predicted the 24,289-ton ship could not be floated for at least a week.

A ring of sand appeared to be building up around the vessel and further dredging may be necessary to pull her free.

'I Hate Deserts Anyway,' Sobs Italian General

Gen. Argentino Declares He Is Essentially a Poet

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British forces in Libya, Jan. 15.—Gen. Francesco Argentino, the dejected Blackshirt officer captured on the Mediterranean strand by a British motorboat crew three days ago, ended a sulky hunger strike today, swept a tearful eye over the barren stretches of sand and cried out:

"For all I care about this desert, you can have it! I myself am a poet."

British officers, who pressed food and drink upon him agreed that the desert itself was certainly not worth fighting for.

His reserve broken, Argentino talked on almost amicable terms, though with a lump in his throat.

He was the commander at Sidi Barrani, Egypt, first Italian stronghold to fall to the British, but the tears came when he referred to the fall of Bardia, Libya, an even greater defeat for the Fascists.

Argentino made his escape from both doomed fortresses, but was spotted by an R. A. F. plane Sunday while hiding at the edge of the sea. A motorboat went out and took him prisoner.

The British officers said his attitude toward the desert fighting was not unusual. They said correspondence seized at Sidi Barrani and Bardia disclosed considerable friction and jealousy among the Italian officers, as well as a constant spying upon them by subordinates who reported on the extent of their loyalty to Fascism.

Even as the siege of the Libyan stronghold of Tobruk continues, the British still are busy rounding up and transporting to camp additional Italian stragglers.

On a plane trip I saw thousands of captives still camping in the desert sand, awaiting transportation eastward to Egypt.

Official United States observers of the siege of Tobruk are Maj. Bonner Fellers, military attache to the United States Legation in Egypt; Col. Brower, of the Air Corps, and Col. William J. Donovan, who arrived at Cairo a week ago and showed up for a short visit. Col. Brower has been making daily inspection trips by plane over the front where desert sandstorms for the past week have hampered the conflict on both sides.

Today the wind died, weather cleared and the sands subsided. The British troops took quick advantage of the opportunity to hasten the movement of all equipment into positions surrounding Tobruk in preparation for a final attack.

Main target of British guns firing into Tobruk is the perimeter of the fortifications containing the Italian artillery. The withering fire such as poured into Bardia just before its final fall has not yet started here.

The Italians are replying, sometimes with a show of energy but usually in weaker fashion.

As at Bardia, they have at least one big naval gun planted ashore. The British soldiers have dubbed it "Tobruk Tom," and are assiduously trying to put it out of action.

British planes are active all along the coast in the Tobruk-Derna regions, but Italian aircraft apparently are giving beleaguered Tobruk as little help as they did at Bardia.

British armored units have firmly in their grasp the region west of Tobruk, right up to the edge of the sea. The line they dominate is at least 15 miles wide, so they are not far from Derna, either.

The British artillery batteries are lined up within 4 miles of the Tobruk perimeter, and night patrols have made "feeler" excursions out in front clear into the rim of the town's defenses.

As a result of British air bombardment, the Italians have abandoned every air base this side of the Akdar Mountains with the exception of Derna, British fliers say. Bases abandoned include the big seaplane port at Bomba, craft there having been flown to the Dodecanese Islands.

At several of these abandoned fields, Italian planes still lie disabled on the ground. A visit to El Adem Airfield—biggest in Libya—to the south of Tobruk and now in British hands, showed 87 such Fascist planes—more than twice the the number the R. A. F. had claimed as destroyed.

Some of the planes suffered only slight damage. So far, the British have not put such planes in shape for possible use against their makers. One reason is that the Italians often have removed some small vital here in the desert. Sometimes Britparts which cannot be reproduced ish soldiers, arriving before the R. A. F. mechanics, have taken away such parts for souvenirs.

Spain Reduces Bread for 'Rich' As Sop to Poor

Copyright by New York Times

Madrid, Jan. 15.—A unique system of rationing whereby the quantities of bread supplied to the well to do are to be drastically reduced and the poor receive slightly larger amounts, will be introduced in Madrid tomorrow.

The "rich"—a couple with one child are placed in that category if income per month from all sources exceeds 900 pesetas (about $72)—hereafter will be permitted 80 grams of bread daily apiece. This is about 3 ounces.

Similarly, a man and wife with one child are assigned to the second category, 120 grams, if income is over $37. The third category, those with incomes below this level, hereafter will get 175 grams.

The bread ration for everybody in recent months has been 150 grams, which is half the quantity permitted for a time after the end of the civil war. Elaborate classification scales based on the number of children in a family have been worked out and the official explanation of the new system is that the "rich" can afford to buy other and more expensive foods to satisfy their hunger.

However, as all other foods of any importance are also rationed or nonexistent, it would seem that the "rich" will have to patronize bootleggers. Making it more difficult for them is the fact that the new restrictions apply to their servants, for whom other foods also will have to be obtained.

British Expect Nazis to Send Men to Libya

Air Blows at Fleet Designed to Prepare Way, London Feels

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 15.—The developing German aerial offensive in the Mediterranean is intended to cut a way through the British navy for transport of Nazi troops to the aid of the hard-pressed Italians in North Africa, British military informants said today.

The attack by Nazi dive bombers on a British naval flotilla January 10 was described as the first major incident in this campaign—a campaign which is recognized to hold potential danger to the British, but which is expected here to fail. The aircraft carrier Illustrious and the cruiser Southampton were damaged January 10.

Using Makeshift Bases

The Germans, said an informed source, must operate from "makeshift" bases on the island of Sicily while the R. A. F. is flying from well-protected and well-equipped bases.

Too, he added, the Nazi dive bombers have only a limited range and, operating from Sicily, are able to attack the British fleet only when it is in that range.

The Germans, he said, "will themselves be open to repeated attacks on their airdromes. Our air superiority is so well established in those regions that no influx of German planes could wrest it from us."

To a suggestion that heavy Nazi bombers might be brought south to assault the British army and its bases, the informant responded:

"Fine. Let the mcome."

Would Relieve Homeland

Any such movement, he remarked, would life some of the pressure from Britain and show strong German preoccupation with the reverses suffered by Italy.

Direct attempts to send German troops to North Africa were not expected before the British "give Italy one more good smash," he added; "but they can't allow all of North Africa to fall without a fight, leaving Italy at our mercy.

"If the Germans do get a couple of divisions through, we'll be delighted."

For, he said, the Nazis had no experience in the kind of warfare adapted to the desert and would have to depend on communications maintained by the Italians—"which can be described with charity as uncertain.

Greeks Claim 'Great Success' In Central Area

By A. C. Sedgwick

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, Jan. 15.—The Athens radio tonight mentions that a "great Greek success" has occurred in the central sector, but the exact whereabouts was not revealed.

A Greek reconnaissance patrol surprised an Italian stronghold in this same central sector and proceeded to occupy what was described as an "important height," the press ministry announced earlier.

It was said that the Greek forces, able to draw up adequate reinforcements, succeeded in repelling an Italian counterattack, and in an action which followed the Greeks took ammunition and other war materials. The capture of the height will undoubtedly influence the outcome of operations in the central sector, it was declared.

The press ministry tonight told of local attacks having been pressed all along the front by the Greek forces with satisfactory results. In a region described as "north of Pogradet," an advance was reported and the enemy troops, it was said, had failed in numerous counter-attacks.

The Athens radio also said the new commander of the Italian forces in Albania, Gen. Ugo Cavallero, was "warmly received by the Greeks," who broke up every effort the Italians made to regain lost ground.

It was suggested that today's enemy effort was for the purpose of reestablishing its prestige, as it were, to prove that the appointment of another commander had infused fresh vigor into the Italian forces. It was held that nowhere along the entire front was the enemy successful.

The Athens radio insists public opinion in Italy is sorely tried by the recent Italian reverses. Public functionaries, as well as university students, it was said, had been forced against their will to attend Fascist gatherings to become reindoctrinated with Fascist ideals. It was also alleged that very serious shortages of food and clothing existed in Italy and that discouragement occasioned by defeats in Albania, Libya and Ethiopia had spread among the people.

'Walking Arsenals' Indicted 24 Hours After Fifth Avenue Murders

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 15.—Precisely 24 hours after they had terrorized a lunch-hour crowd of mid-Manhattan predestrians, killed two men and wounded two others, two former convicts were indicted today on first degree murder charges.

Described by an assistant district attorney as "walking arsenals of destruction," tthey remained under heavy guard in Bellevue Hospital prison ward.

Possessors of long police records and several aliases, they were booked as William Esposito, 28, and his brother, Anthony, 35. They were known to the police also as the Di Stefano brothers.

Willliam was shot in the leg in the 20-minute gun battle yesterday and, like his brother, was beaten severely about the head when subdued by police and bystanders.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine revealed also that his department was considering the possibility that a third man may have been involved in the crimes.

"There must have been a finger man in this," he said, adding that he was investigating the source of the six guns the Espositos carried.

Valentine described the prisoners as "mad dogs" and said that when a priest visited them in the prison ward last night, Anhtony shouted at him:

"Get out of here! I quit talking to you guys 30 years ago."

Assistant District Attorney Jacob J. Rosenblum, in charge of the homicide bureau, said the indictments were returned 20 minutes after the start of testimony before the grand jury.

Asserting he had heard reports the brothers planned to escape, Rosenblum told the court they had been placed in separate rooms known as "cages"—small rooms with iron doors and barred windows.

He said that besides the six revolvers, five of which were of .38-caliber with 8-inch barrels, the brothers had carried 136 cartridges and fired 14.

"Illustrates" Life in America

Berlin, Jan. 15 (AP).—"Wild West in New York" was the heading the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger used today for its account of the holdup and shooting in Fifth Avenue, New York, yesterday.

"This revolver battle . . . ."-the paper said, "illustrates strikingly once again conditions prevailing in 'democracy.' Such banditry goes hand in hand in America with its contemporary plutocratic mode of life."

Cracking of 'War Nerves' Seen In Bizarre British Murder

By William R. Downs

United Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 15.—A murder case as bizarre as any in fiction started unfolding in Hampstead police court today at the arraignment of Arthur Lloyd-James, a stocky man with thinning gray hair and black eyebrows.

The alleged killer was an internationally famous professor; the victim his scarcely less distinguished wife, herself a professor of music; the motive, hiddden in the cracking of "war nerves."

Lloyd-James, one of the world's greatest experts on spoken English, was accused of stabbing fatally in their suburban Hampstead home his wife, known to all of Britain by her maiden name, Elsie Owen.

What was known of the case was related in dispassionate police court language, and Lloyd-James was remanded in custody for one week. The main witness was Divisional Detective Inspector Oxland, who quoted Lloyd-James as saying after his arrest yesterday:

"I thought my powers were failing, and I could not cope with my work. Rather than expect my wife to face a bleak future, I decided she should die and not be asked to face it.

"We were so happy. I wanted her to die while she was like that. I had been in a nursing home with a nervous breakdown. We were so happy."

And then, as if it were an afterthought:

"I thought I would also kill myself."

When the court hearing had run its course Lloyd-James was asked whether he had anything to say. He spoke slowly:

"I am going to say that I do not think I said the words mentioned about taking my own life."

Lloyd-James, 56, is professor of phonetics at the School of Oriental and African Studies here, and is linguistic adviser to the British Broadcasting Corporation.

His wife, 48, was professor of violin at the Royal Academy of Music.

The couple met when Lloyd-James was a master at a country school, after his graduation from Cardiff and Cambridge Universities.

After living awhile at Oxford, the couple returned to their Hampstead home a month before Christmas. A week later they were in a bad air raid. Lloyd-James was badly shaken, mentally as well as physically, and went to a nursing home.

Mrs. Lloyd-James spent some times with relatives, and the couple returned to Hampstead a few days after Christmas. They had been living there alone, sleeping in the basement as the safest part of the house.

A mysterious telephone call sent police to the villa yesterday. They found Mrs. Lloyd-James lying in the drawing room, mortally stabbed. She died a few hours later.

Stokowski Again To Assemble Youth Orchestra

Leopold Stokowski will again assemble an All-American Youth Orchestra, this time for a tour of the United States and Canada, according to an announcement made yesterday National Youth Administrator Aubrey Williams. As before, regional auditions will be held for the selection of not more than five of the best applicants from each State. Members of the 1940 Youth Orchestra will have to take their chances with the others.

All young men and women are eligible to apply for auditions, the age limits being 17 to 25, except in cases of unusual talent. The general requirements for players are: good tone, good rhythm, good sight-reading, good phrasing, proficiency in crescendo and diminuendo and good instruments.

Application forms are now available at all the State NYA offices. Young musicians residing in Washington and vicinity must apply in writing to Albert L. Miller, 1210 Eighteenth Street Northwest. Preliminary auditions will be held here late in February, and the final selection will be made by Stokowski on a tour starting March 4.

Hay! Hay! Alfalfa Club Tosses Frank Hogan's Hat Into Ring

Candidate Gets Laughs, Lets Votes Fall Where They May

"Come to the Land of Alfalfa,
"Come to where the clocks never chime,
"Come where ill humor is only a rumor
"And sadness is labeled a crime."

Frank J. Hogan, former president of the American Bar Association, last night was nominated, unanimously and without debate, for the presidency of the United States on the ticket of the Alfalfa Club.

The nomination took place at the twenty-eighth dinner of the club in the Willard Hotel. As demonstrated by the lines from its song (see above), the club is a strictly-for-humor association. Its members are legislators, top-ranking Government officials and business, professional and industrial leaders.

Because of the nature of the organization, it was pointed out, the fact that there is to be no Presidential election for nearly four years and that the club never has elected a president anyway, were quickly passed over as purely academic questions.

In the Best Tradition

Nominee Hogan's acceptance speech was acclaimed as in the club's best tradition.

The candidate observed that it was the second time within a year "that there has been nominated for the Presidency of the United States a man who never sought public office before."

"And I was a public utilities lawyer long before he was," he added.

In explaining the failure of the club to elect a candidate, Hogan pointed out that, with one previous exception, "all nominees were United States Senators and, while it was possible to elect a Senator in the early days of the Republic, in these days of radio and press enlightenment, the people know what they are doing!"

The first break in a long line of Senatorial nominees, Hogan said, occurred last year "when the club made the miserable mistake of nominating a college professor (William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette College). Hogan asserted that the New Deal had cornered all college professors, save Lewis, so the candidate for 1940 could get no one to vote for him.

"'It has been a bad year for the Lewises . . . even Joe Louis was not so hot politically," Hogan said.

Hogan promised, if elected, to retain Robert H. Jackson as his attorney general because "I want a man who can give me the law, and to whom I can give the law and who will give me the kind of law I want." He also promised to keep another member of President Roosevelt's Cabinet, stating that to keep the ship of State afloat "you've got to have a Hull."

At the conclusion of his speech, Hogan emphasized a "serious note." He said he would leave foreign policy to President Roosevelt who, he said, is doing a "magnificent job."

George L. Harrison, former governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Fleming Newbold, vice president of the Washington Star, were recently elected to membership but were unable to attend the dinner.

Connally Inaugurated

The dinner also saw the inauguration of Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, as club president, and the initiation of these new members—H. Rozier Dulany, Washington lawyer; Carter Barron, manager of Lowe's theaters; Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, President Roosevelt's military aide; Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., House minority leader; Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, governor of the United States Soldiers Home; Lewis Wood, of the Washington bureau of the New York Times, and Commander William B. Young, United States Navy.

After making his farewell speech, former Representative Joseph H. Himes began the inaugural ceremony by designating Thomas W. McKnew, former Representative Bertrand Snell, Henry B. Spencer and Lloyd Wilson to escort Senator Connally to the platform. Himes then told the gathering that the five members of Connally's initiation class ten years ago had voted to determine which of their number was least likely to succeed.

Himes said the ballots had remained sealed since 1931. He directed Thomas W. Littlepage to open the ballots. The name of Connally was written on each ballot.

The initiation was featured by a parade of eight girls from the Capitol Theater chorus, dresses as farmerettes and carrying tiny pitchforks with bundles of alfalfa for the initiates.

The dinner grew solemn for the first time as J. Fred Essary, chief of the Baltimore Sun bureau here, read the roll of club members who died in the last year. They were House Speaker William B. Bankhead, Howard Prescott Gatley, Edgar C. Snyder, Hugh McClellan Southgate, Dr. Arthur Camp Stanley, Samuel Ellsworth Winslow and Senator Key Pittman.

Broadway entertainers were presented by Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and former club president, in a one-hour show.

Liquid CAPUDINE

Debs Alarmed As Draft Cuts Into Stag Line

By Joan Younger
United Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 10.—There's an epidemic of "bugle call blues" raging in cafe society.

This not-so-rare affliction (technically known as draftitis) has hit the debutantes, and taken a serious toll of the stag lines. Most debs are down to their last escort, and he, unhappily, is usually nobody—a boy under 21 or an old hand over 36.

The casualty list is long. Billy Livingston, glamor boy of last year and still in there pitching, is scheduled to spend the winter in the Sunny South—with the Army in Alabama.

"And can you imagine—he volunteered!" one debutante commented witheringly.

Fletcher Godfrey, known as the deb's delight, and current squire of Josette Daly, will also leave early in February to carry a gun. He was drafted.

Blaine Faber, who has been slated to marry Josephine Johnson sometime this winter, also is expecting to leave soon. Being married to a heiress is no protection against the draft. James McGuire, who is now on his honeymoon with the former Mary Jane Cuddahy, notified his friends that he'd be back February 2 to leave with the rest of the draftees. If a wife can support herself, she is no exemption.

There is a general consensus that this steady drain of society's young men about town has the debutantes in a fret. They talk about little else, and some have even gone so far as to threaten their parents that they'll take up ambulance driving or nursing as a career, instead of marriage.

Although Brenda Frazier's favorite escort, John (Shipwreck) Kelly, hasn't yet heard the call to arms, he is expected to be in the Army by spring. Since he is a former star football player, Brenda has little hope that flat feet will keep him out. Even if they are secretly married, as many think, Miss Frazier's million would not make her an exemption.

Bill Babst, the plumbing czar's son, is another young man about town who will be leaving next month, which puts Mary Ann Travers back in circulation again.

Rulon Neilson, of the steel fortune, is slated to go up with the next group of draftees, and Winthrop Rockefeller has enlisted. Both men, regradless of their fortunes, will enter the service as privates.

El Dorado Club Installs Officers

F. Charles Brown was installed as president of the El Dorado Club, social and civic organization, at a meeting last night in the Colonial Hotel.

Others who took office were W. B. Hooker, vice president; Frederick Britton, secretary, and J. W. Falk, treasurer. Dr. Victor J. Myers, retiring president, reported on 1940's activities.

Mrs. Austin Wills Friends, Kin $400,000

Radio Expert's Widow Made Church Groups Contingent Heirs

Mrs. Laura Osborne Austin, late of 3136 Newark Street Northwest, left her $400,000 estate to friends and relatives.

Mrs. Austin died here last Tuesday, leaving a will made June 26, 1939. She named as executors Attorney Joseph Fairbanks and her brother, Rockwell C. Osborne, Winter Park, Fla., who petitioned the District Court for authority to handle the property.

The greater part of the property was left to Osborne and to two god-children, Sidney F. Austin, Mountain Lakes, N. J., and Mrs. Emily Austin Eddy, wife of Lieut. Ian C. Eddy, U. S. N. Should all of these die without heirs one-half the property would be given to the surviving specific legatees and one-sixth each to the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation, the Vestry of St. Albans Parish and the American Forestry Association.

Mrs. Austin left $5,000 each to Mrs. Louise L. Fullerton, LaCrosse, Wis.; Louise MacDonald, 2700 Connecticut Avenue; Helen S. Holdbrook, 3133 Connecticut Avenue; Mrs. Josephine B. Wales, 3609 Norton Place, and Mrs. Emelyn T. Thompson, Middlebury, Vt.

There were bequests of $3,000 each to George H. Wales, Navy officer, and Robert C. Wales, 3809 Norton Place.

Among $1,000 bequests was one to the Washington Club, 1701 K Street Northwest.

The estate included $34,000 realty, $32,000 cash in banks, securities and other personal property of about $270,000 and a $90,000 interest in the estate of Mrs. Austin's sister, Mrs. Edna Osborne Follett, Winter Park, Fla.

Mrs. Austin was the widow of Dr. Louis Winslow Austin, radio expert, who died in 1932.

Watch Family Now While Epidemic Colds Are Spreading

At a treacherous time like this, with an epidemic of contagious colds all around you, what you do today may save you and your family a lot of sickness, worry and trouble later.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION . . . put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) use Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today—have them handy, ready to use.

Plane Output Up to Schedule, 4 Builders Say

Leave Production In Industry's Hands, They Urge

Public impressions to the contrary, the aircraft industry is up to schedule in production of fighting planes and engines, four members of the industry assured an audience yesterday at a National Press Club luncheon.

All four pleaded, for the sake of continued production and future orderly expansion, that aircraft production be left in the hands of the aircraft industry. They pointed out that France and England, after much experimentation, finally returned production control to the industry.

French production of one single type engine at the armistice, said J. Carlton Ward, jr., president of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation, who was in France at the time, was at a monthly rate 50 per cent in excess of the entire engine production of the United States at that time.

Delays Laid to Changes

Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, pointed out problems faced by the aircraft industry in the program of rapid expansion, and said aircraft production of the present scheduled 37,000 military planes of all types was up to date.

"But," he cautioned, "there are new programs taking shape today. The British recently indicated that they may need 12,000 more bombers. Our own air forces may require 12,000 or more additional planes . . . Frankly, the members of our industry haven't the slightest idea as to how big a program the Government contemplates. They only know that the demand promises to grow as long as the war continues."

Delays in delivery heretofore, he said, have been due in part to changes in orders both from the United States Government and the British, including demands for self-sealing tanks, heavier armaments, turrets and armor. In addition, he pointed out, production of the first plane of a new production order requires 14 months before production can begin.

Doubtful of Reuther Plan

Col. Jouett said the plan of Walter P. Reuther, C. I. O. official, to use idle automotive production capacity in building 500 planes a day, contained "certain phases that seem impracticable."

Production of 500 of the cheapest type of combat plane, he said, would cost $25,000,000 a day, or $7,500,000,000 a year on one model alone. To build 500 planes a day, he said, would require 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 shop employes who, with their families would make a city of more than 9,000,000 persons.

Arming 500 planes a day would require 4,000 machine guns a day, he said, at which rate the year's production of machine guns would be absorbed in 2½ days. In addition, Col. Jouett said, investigation has shown that less than 10 per cent of automotive machine tools could be adapted to aircraft production.

Other speakers were Glenn L. Martin, president of the Glen L. Martin Co., of Baltimore, and Guy W. Vaughan, president of the Curtiss-Wright Aeronautical Corporation.

Reuther Replies To Criticisms

Walter P. Reuther, C. I. O. official who recently advocated use of idle automotive productive capacity for building warplanes, yesterday issued a general reply to criticisms of his plan.

His plan, he maintained, would not "dislocate" the automotive industry. At present, he said, less than 10 per cent of the industry's capacity is being used in aircraft production. He said production-line methods would obviate the objection based on required number of man-hours.

Possible bottlenecks in armaments, instruments and the like, Reuther said, "can be met if production of such armament, instruments, etc., is spread over existing industries whose machine capacities and production facilities are adaptable to such production."

Police Judges Lax, Says Schulte

office, attended by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

His criticism of the judges was echoed by Maj. Brown, who said if the jurists in Traffic Court would agree to cooperate "maybe we could get somewhere."

Assailing the present system of rotating judges in Traffic Court each month, Schulte indicated he would press for legislation to provide the city with a permanent court for traffic matters, with a full-time judge.

He struck at the lack of uniform fines and penalties imposed against flagrant offenders under the existing system and added:

"I want to see more fellows go to jail. That may seem serious, but death is also serious."

Accident-breeding violations would be curtailed, Schulte predicted, if the motoring public came to realize that the judges would hand out stiff penalties. Instead of permitting a motorist to pay a nominal fine and then go back on the street and repeat his offense, the legislator recommended jail sentences of from five to ten days for speeding and careless driving.

"We have got to insist," Schulte told the police and traffic officials, "that the streets of this city belong to the people and automobile drivers have got to go slow and use common sense."

He charged that truck drivers here are the "wildest in the country" and street cars and buses are "continually jumping lights and cutting corners."

"I make the statement," however, "that the judges are to blame for this situation, for not cracking down on traffic violations."

Maj. Brown said his department receives the best cooperation from Judge George Neilson, newest appointee to the Police Court bench. Judge Neilson, a former prosecutor in the corporation counsel's office, has frequently expressed a willingness to accept full-time duty in Traffic Court. In a recent speeding case where the defendant was accused of traveling 70 miles an hour, Judge Neilson fined him the maximum penalty of $25, remarking "I wish it could be more."

Those present at the conference favored reestablishment of a night court for traffic offenders. The law now provides for such a "cafeteria court," but it has not been in existence for more than ten years. With a night court, it was explained, drunken drivers could be taken before a judge before they had time to "sober up" and other violators would receive swift justice.

Suggests Ridicule

Maj. Brown said he has been in a "ticklish spot" since the speed limit was increased to 25 miles per hour. Motorists seldom drive less than 30 now, he said, and the judges refuse to impose penalties because there is not sufficient "leeway."

"I am in favor of ridiculing municipal agencies which are lax," said Schulte, "and if the judges are ridiculed enough we might get results."

Maj. Brown lamented the necessity of operating with an insufficient personnel, pointing out he asked for 100 additional policemen in the 1942 budget and got only 20.

He said the District's population had increased 38 per cent in ten years and in that period he had been granted but a 13 per cent boost in personnel. To bring the manpower ratio up to population figures of 1930, he now needs 282 additional men, Brown added.

In this connection, Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, newly named chairman of the House subcommittee on District appropria-

Vigilante Plan To Cut Traffic Toll Assailed

'Spying' Hit by A. A. A. Unit; Safety Society Urges 100 More Police

The Washington division of the American Automobile Association and the Washington Safety Society, an organization of safety engineers, last night in separate actions condemned the recent proposal to establish a citizens' traffic vigilante committee.

"Any scheme which would involve the possibility of one citizen spying on another is unsound in principle and dangerous in practice," the motor club declared in a letter to the District Commissioners.

Power to enforce the traffic laws should be retained by police only, and should not be entrusted "to untrained individuals or average citizens," the safety engineers unanimously decided in a resolution.

Instead of forming a committee of 100 citizens to aid police detecting traffic violators, as recently proposed here, members of the Washington Safety Society urged the addition of 100 police to the force.

It was asserted that while "snooping" might have the psychological advantage of restraining traffic violators, an undesirable reaction on the part of the public would more than offset any possible benefits.

The A. A. A. letter to the Commissioners observed that the vigilante "idea was tried in Washington about five years ago and did little or nothing to reduce accidents or to help the police in the enforcement of traffic regulations."

The motor club also scored the erection of death signs at points where traffic fatalities have occurred.

"There is no rhyme or reason in imposing an overdose of morbidity on our bad traffic situation," the letter stated.

Vanderbilt to Speak On Traffic Courts

The Women's Safety Committee and the District Advisory Board of the American Automobile Association will hold a joint luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today in the Willard Hotel, to hear Arthur T. Vanderbilt discuss "Modernizing Traffic Court Methods and Procedure in Washington."

Vanderbilt, who is chairman of the National Committee on Traffic Law Enforcement, has just completed an 18-month study of traffic court administration throughout the country.

missed. Police said Riddell W. Beebe, 20, of 811 Tewksbury Place Northwest, was driving the station wagon.

Mrs. Anita M. Balcom, 53, of 406 Surry Street, Chevy Chase, Md., also experienced a narrow escape when her automobile ran off the road in Rock Creek Park, plunged down a 30-foot slope and overturned. Her only injury was a crushed hand, pinned between the car and the ground as she gripped the door.

She was admitted to Georgetown Hospital after examination at Walter Reed Hospital. The accident occurred in Military Road near Ross drive. Mrs. Balcom said her vision was impaired by lights of an oncoming car and a heavy mist.

Scores of fenders were dented and tempers were frayed by dangerous skidding in Washington.

Hazardous driving kept automobiles at a snail's pace, minimizing the possibility of personal injuries. Majority of police reports said just "property damage only."

Traffic jams were numerous throughout the city and on nearby highways. Ice-covered hills in the Cleveland and Woodley Park sections produced many accidents and police had to aid stranded drivers in the 1800 block Harvard Street Northwest on two occasions.

A city refuse department truck sanding a hill in the 2900 block Newark Street Northwest, crashed into a parked automobile when it skidded out of control.

Raymond J. James, 34, of 1518 V Street Southeast, was bruised on his back and shoulder when his automobile was struck by a skidding bus on the Anacostia Bridge about 11:15 a. m. He was treated by a private physician.

A watchman on the Highway Bridge reported "more than 100" minor collisions on the span in the early morning rush hours.

Most of the ice on streets had either disappeared or been sanded by noontime and the movement of traffic returned to normal, then became bad again early today. William Xanten, chief of the City Refuse Department, said that ten trucks, equipped with sand-spreaders, had been placed into service along with vehicles from the Capitol Transit Co.

Paul Guen, 46, of Canton, Ohio, suffered a broken bone in the right foot when he slipped while alighting from a taxicab on Capitol Hill. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Five-year-old Virginia May Hunt fell in front of her home, 1126 Park Place Northeast, and received an arm injury. She was given first aid at Casualty Hospital and was released.

At an inquest yesterday, a coroner's jury exonerated Jessie C. Bean, 39, of Manassas, Va., in connection with the traffic death of 8-year-old William Edward Shipp, of 710 G Street Northeast.

The child died at Casualty Hospital December 23, a short time after he was crushed under Bean's truck at Eighth and G Streets Northeast.

A verdict of "accidental death" was returned by the jury after it was testified William and his brother, Larry, 6, were riding a coaster wagon alongside the truck when the heavy vehicle made a right turn. Bean told police he did not see the boys.

Our New Chief Of Purse

Representative George H. Mahon, of Colorado City, Tex., the new chairman of the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations, has been in Congress six years. For two years he has been a member of the subcommittee which passes legislative judgment upon Washington's budget. That gives him the distinction of being the most experienced legislator who could have been assigned to this task.

It is the District's good fortune that Mr. Mahon has had some experience in dealing with municipal problems of the Nation's Capital and that he is a straightforward, fair-minded young man who wants to give the District a "square deal." Under the present system all the District can expect is that its budget will be analyzed fairly by men who have little familiarity with the city's needs and problems. Those who know Mr. Mahon have no doubt that he will work conscientiously in the position to which he has been assigned. But it is also evident that his brief residence here will be a real handicap even if he is inclined to give legislative expression to the wishes of the community.

A good deal of satisfaction may be found in the fact that the haphazard system of government imposed on the District has brought to the fore a well-intentioned and sincere young legislator. Like every other appointment to this post in recent years, however, his designation emphasizes once more the urgency of shifting responsibility for Washington's municipal affairs from Congressmen representing far-away districts to a body of outstanding local residents.

Too Excessive

There is something more than a little derogatory to the Federal Reserve System in Jesse H. Jones' comment that he doesn't "understand this excess reserve thing." Excess reserves are the breath of life to our "Supreme Court of Money." They are the idle fuel of inflation. And the Federal Reserve System has just asked for new anti-inflationary powers from Congress aimed at mopping up excess reserves.

Excess reserves, of course, mean exactly what they say. They are extra reserves beyond the statutory reserves held in the Federal Reserve System against which the banks lend money. One dollar of reserves would support about $7 available new money. The gold imports, which furnish the reserves, have been so huge that reserves in excess now amount to $7,000,000,000. Obviously, if the banks kept on lending till they had exhausted this lending capacity at the Federal Reserve, the expansion in our money supply would be inflationary. For it would amount to about $50,000,000,000, or about double the bank money outstanding.

Accordingly the Federal Reserve would like more powers from Congress to remove the danger. This could be done, for one thing, by marking up the reserve ratio. Then part of the "excess" would be transformed into reserve; in other words, it would be mopped up, or held from use.

It might seem curious that, just at the time when money is needed for financing defense, the Federal Reserve should be seeking to lock up spare money, and attach the label "kept for reserve." The fact is that there would be no shortage of funds for defense. Banks and other institutions have plenty. The public has plenty on deposit in the banks. In fact, Mr. Morgenthau agrees with Mr. Eccles that for several reasons the public should be encouraged to invest in defense. But a defense boom makes for buoyant spending for general purposes. It breeds a boom psychology, and this is the reason that the Federal Reserve System wants to lock away some of the money which a boom-minded public might one day wish to use.

There isn't any pretense any longer by Federal Reserve authorities that their brakes (or, when deflation is threatened, their accelerators) are 100 per cent effective. Our economic system is still run, Mr. Leon Henderson and other economic controllers permitting, by the multitudinous decision of millions of free individuals. And mechanical devices cannot govern the manifestations of the human psyche as expressed in boom-mindedness—or depression. But the Federal Reserve System, in its recent memorandum, was merely seeking means the better to carry out its statutory duty to prevent injurious credit expansion. It doesn't rate a slur for that. Anyhow, Mr. Jones, as the head of the greatest banking institution in the world, the R. F. C., may have condemned to satisfaction with ignorance a citizenry which over years of monetary experimentation had been urged to get monetarily literate.

Mr. Hull Explains

In his testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Secretary Hull brought out clearly and forcefully the meaning and scope of the dangerous situation confronting the United States. In so doing he advanced cogent arguments in support of the lease-lend bill which the committee is considering.

During the past decade, the foundations of orderly international relations have steadily been undermined by the aggressor nations. They have shown nothing but contempt for law, order and justice. They have stopped at nothing to accomplish their aims. The result is, as Mr. Hull points out, that "mankind is today face to face, not with regional wars or isolated conflicts, but with an organized, ruthless and implacable movement of steadily expanding conquest." He added:

> We are in the presence of forces which are not restrained by considerations of law or principles of morality; which have fixed no limits for their program of conquest; which have spread over large areas on land and are desperately struggling now to seize control of the oceans as an essential means of achieving and maintaining their conquest of the other continents.

But, some ask, is not the Atlantic a barrier sufficiently wide to keep the dictators from undertaking aggressions in this hemisphere? If Hitler has found it difficult to cross the English Channel and invade Great Britain would he find it less difficult to cross the very much wider ocean which separates the European continent from the New World? The answer is, of course, that the Atlantic is and will remain a barrier, as the English Channel is and will remain a barrier, only so long as control of the high seas is not in the hands of the aggressors. "Should that control be gained by the partners of the Tripartite Pact," says Mr. Hull, "the danger to our country, great as it is today, would be multiplied many fold."

Were Hitler able to overcome British sea power, German forces could cross the Channel in an hour's time. Similarly, "were Britain defeated, and were she to lose command of the seas, Germany could easily cross the Atlantic—especially the South Atlantic—unless we were ready and able to do what Britain is doing now," the Secretary of State points out.

We might, of course, in time arm this hemisphere as Great Britain herself is now armed. We might in time build up a fleet capable of protecting the New World from an attack by the aggressors as Great Britain has so far managed to protect her sea lanes. But that will take time and our best opportunity of gaining such time is to strengthen Great Britain's defenses. Thus to the extent that we enable the British to keep on fighting we add to our own security. And as Secretary Hull argues:

> For us to withhold aid to victims of attack would not result in a restoration of peace. It would merely tend to perpetuate the enslavement of nations already invaded and subjugated and provide an opportunity for the would-be conquerors to gather strength for an attack against us.

Nor can we ignore for a moment the fact that more than one nation which depended for its security from attack on scrupulous observance of neutrality legislation and international law has lost its independence. We cannot, in the name of principles which the dictators have so frequently and so ruthlessly flouted, refrain from taking every necessary measure to insure our self-defense.

In the meantime, speed in building up our defenses and rushing aid to Britain is our greatest need. In the face of an emergency which might prove to be greater than any this Nation has ever before had to face we must move fast. Delay, at this juncture, would be the first-born twin of disaster.

A City Prosecutor

The suggestion that the District be given a city prosecutor to handle cases in the Police Court is especially impressive because it comes from former Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, who for several years supervised this work. Mr. Seal knows from experience that the corporation counsel himself can give little time to prosecutions or even the supervision of his assistants' activities in court. His time is largely occupied with legislative problems and with the giving of legal advice to the Board of Commissioners. Separation of this service from the prosecution of cases in the court room might well prove beneficial to both.

At present traffic cases and others before the Police Court are prosecuted by young assistants to the corporation counsel. Sometimes they are lacking in experience. At all times they lack centralized guidance and supervision by a trained prosecutor giving his full attention to this phase of law enforcement. A full-time city prosecutor appointed for the special purpose of presenting the District's case against alleged law-breakers would probably give new meaning to drives against traffic accidents and petty crime.

The salary for such a post should be large enough to attract a competent and experienced attorney. Care would be necessary, too, to avoid the appointment of a political hack. If the right man could be found, however, he would probably do a much more effective job than any assistant corporation counsel can be expected to do. Particularly in view of their efforts to counteract the current orgy of traffic killings, the Commissioners ought to give this suggestion the prompt consideration it merits.

For National Unity

Democracy is truly tested by its performance under emergency conditions. For people accustomed to freedom of expression find it difficult to attain complete unity of purpose, and such unity is of the utmost importance to a nation facing a crisis. Minority groups are tempted to make up for their weakness in numbers by vehemence in their attacks upon majority proposals. Bitterness and distrust may thus easily come to the fore unless a high degree of statesmanship is manifested.

On several occasions President Roosevelt has made stirring appeals for cooperation of all groups represented in the Nation in meeting the critical situation now confronting the United States. One of the dominant notes in his message to Congress was expressed in the words "without regard to partisanship." He noted that the two major parties were not divided in the recent election campaign on issues of foreign policy. And he concluded with the positive statement that "our strength is in our unity of purpose."

This message laid the groundwork for a genuine bipartisan effort to speed our preparations for national defense. When it came to the planning of legislation to give effect to the policy which the country as a whole has approved, however, Republican members of Congress were excluded from the conferences. The lease-lend bill went to Congress solely as an Administration measure, in spite of the fact that a little skillful maneuvering might have won advance Republican support for its essential principles. While the President was calling for nonpartisanship, he seems to have forgotten the basic requirements for interparty cooperation.

That unfortunate oversight has undoubtedly helped to arouse a feeling of bitterness among some legislators representing the minority party. Disturbing reactions have already come to the surface in some instances. Unless these are checked Congress may soon be debating the lease-lend bill in a spirit of partisanship and rancor. Such a fight in the face of a national emergency would be fraught with grave dangers. It should be averted and doubtless can be averted with a proper display of statesmanship.

It has been suggested that Wendell Willkie be invited to the White House, when he visits Washington, as a token of the Nation's solidarity in meeting its defense problems. Such a gesture would doubtless help to close the breach resulting from the exclusion of Republicans from the conferences on the lease-lend bill. The important thing is that rising partisanship and emotional controversy be subordinated to cool anlysis of national policy in a spirit of cooperation. If that objective is to be attained, the President will have to remember that cooperation and nonpartisanship are not one-way streets.

REMEMBERING INDIAN SUMMER

Lying all summer in intimate grass . . . (the flowers
Giddy with wind and grieving only slightly
In rain and dew) . . . I pulled horizons nightly
About me like blankets old and stitched with stars,
Warm blue woolen blankets worked in quiet hours
By friendly neighbor-women beyond our pasture bars.

Naked tonight my knoll sweeps withered asters
Feebly against wide winter-lifted distance.
Cold crackling stars confirm the wind's insistence
My only blankets now are made with hands.
Ah well, when space was meek and men were masters,
I plucked from fleecy sky unfading strands.

Prefers Experts

I am sure every Washingtonian is deeply interested in ways to protect their children and loved ones from traffic injury, but I don't see how they can afford to have experiments tried upon them. The proposal to again have the "Committee of 100" as vigilantes to report observations to the Traffic Department seems absurd. Are the paid traffic officials willing to admit defeat and shunt their responsibilities off on the vigilantes? I don't think so, but if they are, let's just hire the vigilantes and save the money now paid to the Traffic Department. More stringent qualifications and rigid tests for driving permits should be adopted—and what about compulsory insurance? The argument of cost to operators should be discounted entirely. If one can't afford to pay insurance, how can he be expected to pay damages which in all probability may exceed insurance costs? Let's see what other States are doing—let's do the job intelligently and by experts, not laymen.

PAUL F. STEINER.
Washington, Jan. 14

Suggests Cure

Assumption, without authority, by citizens, that they can help correct traffic by reporting incidents would result in (1) a racket being at once built up against owners of good cars who would be considered as willing to pay graft to keep out of complications; (2) there would be but little cooperation by the courts because of the evidence or lack of it or the character of it; (3) delays in trials would be long; (4) cooperation by the Traffic Department would be extremely unlikely; (5) resentment by the police would be immediate.

I submit that the best all-around cure for traffic ills and other ills as well would be the appointment of a Commissioner of Investigations exactly similar to the one in New York City. In the latter city this official has saved the city millions of dollars and all manner of grief in many ways. If Washington had such an official responsible to Congress or possibly the Commissioners, he would at once be able to save at least 10 per cent and probably 20 per cent on the budget just as it has been done in New York. That money put on traffic would very soon have an effect to the good.

Tool And Die Labor

In reading about the Wage and Hour Division policy, I am in favor of paying overtime wages for more than eight hours work in any one day. However, there is a clause in some of the labor contracts where the time and a half for overtime penalty is further penalized by double time after two hours, or above 10 hours a day. This may not be true in production plants, but in the tool and die industry we are going to find ourselves so short of mechanics that we will have to work 11 to 12 hours per day, in which case we will pay eight hours straight time, two hours time and a half, and, in the 12-hour class, two hours double time.

If generally adopted this will increase the national defense cost enormously. Yet, on second thought, it will put more money in the workers' hands, which will give additional buying power, in turn for which other industries will profit.

It is also important to call our workers' attention not only by paying them their wages but also to the patriotic duty to help expedite this national emergency, which in my mind, is more important than money or anything else.

It was not long ago that we worked 12-hour shifts and seven days per week and thought nothing of it, and there was no emergency.

I'd be glad to be of service to Mr. Knudsen or anybody else and will give my time gratis to help get started. It seems that it is awfully slow.

The "Traffic Vigilantes" Plan

I have seen the letter of Charles D. Drayton in The Washington Post for January 12 in which the suggestion is made that the traffic situation may be improved by a group of "vigilantes," supplementing the police assigned to traffic. I note also, in this morning's papers, it is reported that local traffic authorities have such a program under consideration.

Such a citizens' voluntary corps is a wholly workable plan. In my opinion it is a major and necessary step in reducing traffic violations leading to injuries and death. It is a plan which, with variations, has been tried and has been outstandingly successful in many localities in the United States.

An article by J. C. Furnas appeared in the December 11, 1937, issue of the Saturday Evening Post entitled "They Get Your Number," describing such plans, explaining the necessity therefor, outlining the good and bad features of many of them, and statistically demonstrating the efficiency of the workable plans tried in various places.

A year or so ago I had occasion to gather some material on the subject from sundry sources, including the Better Traffic Committee of Pittsburgh, National Safety Council in Chicago, Highway Safety Division of the State Police of Maine, National Citizens Traffic Patrol, and other sources. At the time I was the chairman of a committee of the Junior Board of Commerce in Washington. We lost heart then because a "vigilantes" plan tried locally some years back failed woefully due to very inadequate preparation and consideration. That plan had incurred the disapproval of the American Automobile Association which, since then, seems to have adopted a policy of opposing any such plans.

On the basis of my own study of the problem, which is not that of an expert, but a deeply interested layman, I have concluded that, as Mr. Furnas said in the magazine article referred to—

"If there were a cop on every corner in town and a State trooper on every mile of country road, American motor-fatality rates would fall with a dizzying rush." So many officers being impracticable, the next best thing is a corps of well-trained, intelligent volunteers, schooled and selected for sound judgment and adequately and carefully coordinated with sincere and cooperative police authorities.

The solution to the traffic problem does not lie (as every good traffic expert will agree) in the arbitrary, unreasonable and bombastic exacting of unjustifiably high fines and penalties levied by judges of the Police Court upon those few violators who happen to be caught, however well intended the action of such judges may be. The solution lies in increasing the percentage of violators who are caught.

Glory That Is Greece

The 28th day of October, A. D. 1940, has been recorded in history as the day of the downfall of Mussolini and the day to revive the glory that is Greece. An ultimatum was given to Greece on that day to be complied with within three hours, and before waiting for the expiration thereof, Italian troops marched on from Albania into Greek territory.

Mussolini, however, found that the Evzones stood up to their reputation as the world's best fighters and the results are well known to the whole world, except to the people of Italy, where censorship colors the news to the Fascists' desire. But even there the truth is creeping in and the people are awakening from their dreams of a Roman empire and soon we shall see this dictator's downfall.

But the gallant Hellenic troops did something greater than to stop Mussolini's dreams. Just as Leonidas and Miltiades stopped the Persian barbarian hordes at Thermopylae and Salamis 2,500 years ago, and thus saved civilization, so the modern Hellenes stopped the annihilation of democracy in Europe. They did more than that: They stopped general conflagration in the Balkans; they gave courage to Turkey and Yugoslavia not to fall into the Axis fold; they gave England the opportunity to establish naval and air bases in Crete, other Grecian islands and the mainland; to move swiftly troops, airplanes and war material to the assistance of Greece; extended free action of the British fleet in the Mediterranean Sea; opened the offensive against the Italians in Egypt and drove the invaders out of that country, thus saving the main artery of Great Britain—the Suez Canal—from the Axis control.

But the Hellenic troops did something more. They revived the good name of Greece in America to such an extent that even those who never heard of Greece before understand that the country in which democracy was born in the days of Pericles turned the tide toward freedom from fascism, nazism and communism in other nations.

Now is the time to assist Greece with everything that can possibly be sent to that little but heroic country.

Defense Bill

The defense bill just presented to the Congress, passage of which is certain because of the overwhelming number of New Dealers in the Congress, is, indeed, tragic irony in that we profess to defend democracy in Europe, while destroying democracy and our liberties in America.

If conclusive evidence were needed that the majority of the American people have gone completely loco this bill is the answer. By enacting it Congress abdicates its constitutional duties including the right and duty to declare or not to declare war, and almost ceases to exist except in name.

The bill suspends the Constitution, and creates a dictatorship without parallel, and in a gentleman least qualified to exercise such powers, and who will never surrender willingly any power conferred upon him.

When this bill becomes a law we will be headed for national bankruptcy, for war all over the world, the destruction of our institutions and liberties, and the day will come, in the deliberate opinion of the undersigned, when we will have to again fight to regain our liberties, and to restore constitutional government in our country.

The Post Impressionist

Joyce's Friends

JAMES JOYCE once said that if Dublin were destroyed it could be built anew from his books. No other writer, it is true, centered his whole art upon one city. With Dedalus, with Lenehan, with Bloom, we traverse it street by street from suburban Sandycove, down Dame and Wicklow Streets, past the Green and Trinity, until we plunge into the nether darkness of the Coombe and Inchicore.

And yet Joyce, though an exile in body only, had no pride in the Dublin that he wrote of. When the drunken Dedalus shouted: "But I say: Let my country die for me," he merely echoed the inner bitterness of Joyce and could have added: "Let Dublin die for me."

Literary Dublin did not take kindly to him in those early years. He was too cosmopolitan to blend with its provincialism, too haughty, too insolent, too arrogantly disdainful of its resurrected Celtic gods. "We have met too late," he told the astonished Yeats. "You are too old to be influenced by me."

He was a precocious child. At 9 he amazed and pleased his father, an ardent Parnellite, by writing a political pamphlet entitled "Et tu Healy," a bitter indictment of one of the men who had betrayed the Irish Cavour. At 12 he was reading Ibsen in the original. He worshiped the Norwegian. When the Irish National Theater movement was launched in 1901 he exploded in an outrage: "This! With the Master dying in Christiana!" At Clongowes Wood he turned to poetry, but his verses were pitiful little songs. Many are to be found in "Chamber Music." They are mawkish, sentimental. Years later he would mourn his failure as a poet, saddle the blame for his lost music on the Jesuits. "They drove his wits away with visions of hell. He will never capture the Attic note. The note of Swinburne, of all poets, the white death and the ruddy birth. That is his tragedy. He can never be a poet."

There were few whom he could call friends. Colum and Tom Kettle, Eglington and Oliver Gogarty were the closest. When Gogarty rented the Martelle Tower at Sandycove all three came to live with him. They swore, drank, quarreled, bathed naked by moonlight. In the end Joyce was thrown out and then he took that memorable walk as Stephen Dedalus, swinging and apostrophizing his ash plant.

Joyce met and measured every figure of importance in literary Dublin and was measured in return. "I don't know whether you are a fountain or a cistern," AE once said to Joyce, "and I'm afraid you have not chaos enough in you to make a world." Yet, only Shaw was perpetually unfriendly. He threw his copy of "Ulysses" in the fire, later told a biographer, "I could not write the words Mr. Joyce uses; my prudish hand would refuse to form the letters."

Lodgers and matrons, commercial travelers and students were his clay and straw. They lived, loved, quarreled, ate, drank, bred and died under a lowering Irish sky and in a city heavy-lidded with decay and corruption. There is little nobility in the characters he portrays. Farrington, bullied by day by his employer, becomes a bully of his squalling youngster by night; Eveline, frustrated of her lover, bows weakly to the toils of custom, her white, passive face frightened by the tumbling seas of the world; the street-by-street meanderings of the lecherous Lenehan and the dissolute Lord John Corley; gaunt faces stare at the passing Bloom out of tumbledowneries and foul rookeries; there is a sense of frustration throughout. Even the quiet, urban Gabriel Conroy is caught in the meshes. For hours at the Misses Morkan's annual dance he dreams of holding his wife in his arms. But a ghost rises out of her childhood, long since dead, and suddenly it is as if a chasm stretched between them. "His soul swooned slowly as he heard the snow falling faintly through the universe and faintly falling, like the descent of their last end, upon all living and the dead."

Stephen Dedalus, of course, is the theme of Joyce from beginning to end. All the others are merely his familiars. But even Dedalus, who attains immortality in "Ulysses," is forever striving to escape from bondage, from the hell with which he is threatened for his adolescent sins; from "the fire of hell which gives no light, from the stench, the sulphurous brimstone which does not consume itself."

And now Dedalus is dead and the ash plant has fallen forever from the limp hand of his creator.

'On Loitering'

I loitered long but not lazily over your soliloquy "On Loitering." Of course, in so doing, I was no more a vag than was Hamlet when he loitered over "to be or not to be." In fact I was working with my brain.

Forsooth, I found profound philosophy in your own loitering to be compared with the vagrancy of Hamlet. As you intimated, the aged cobbler arrested for "loitering" in a park may have been celebrating as Shakespeare was wont to do. And when you refer to such practices as "gazing vacuously out of club windows" in comparison with the cobbler's "crime" you reach to the bases of the revolutionary tendencies in the world today. Aye, there's the rub!

Willkie, Roosevelt And Hull

BECAUSE of the flood of rumors about Wendell L. Willkie's boldly forthright response to the President's lease-lend plan to aid Britain, the background of his action both deserves and requires to be set forth.

Contrary to the common impression, Willkie consulted no one beyond the circle of his closest personal intimates before deciding to issue a statement approving the lease-lend bill in principle. He made his decision alone, and for two reasons which do him considerable credit.

In the first place, he is convinced that if Britain falls and Germany achieves the domination of the world, the American life we know cannot withstand the ensuing economic and political pressures. With such a conviction, he feels it incumbent on him to sink factionalism, and as the most successful recent leader of the Republican opposition, to support the President's policy whenever he can. Secondly, he is deeply disturbed by the transparent effort of such party chieftains as Senators Robert A. Taft and Arthur H. Vandenberg, former President Herbert Hoover and Thomas E. Dewey, to make the Republican Party a sort of isolationist house organ. And even though it means the end of his own political career, he is determined to oppose them.

SUCH WERE the points Willkie considered during a day of quiet counsel-taking with himself, after the lease-lend bill had been introduced in Congress. By the end of the day, the Republican bigwigs had already begun to fulminate against the bill. They tipped the balance in Willkie's mind. He thereupon began work on his statement.

As sometimes happens, the business of writing forced Willkie to reduce his thoughts to exact order. On reexamining and classifying them, he found that he had no doubts at all as to the significance of the war's outcome, but was far from satisfied with his information about the current war picture. Some time before, while working on a projected magazine article on foreign policy, he had conceived the notion of going to London to find out for himself how things stood. Now it seemed to him that such a trip of personal investigation would greatly enhance his usefulness as a leader of the "loyal opposition."

While in Washington at the Gridiron dinner, he had seen and talked with Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Hull had cordially invited him to ask for information, or otherwise employ the State Department's facilities, whenever he chose. Accordingly he telephoned Hull, told him of what he planned and asked whether he might have a passport. Hull, though friendly, asked for a couple of hours to "think the thing over." Willkie, well knowing who would be Hull's companion in thought, waited anxiously until Hull called back.

WHEN HE DID SO Hull was evidently greatly pleased. He explained to Willkie that he had talked to the President; that the President warmly approved Willkie's plan, and that he had asked to have an invitation transmitted to Willkie to visit the White House if he wished before leaving for London. Hull added that while Willkie would in no sense be an authorized emissary, he would be glad to give him a personal letter requesting British officials to extend appropriate courtesies to a distinguished private citizen. Willkie then told Hull that he intended to take with him two private friends, the New York philanthropist, Landon K. Thorne, and the able publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, John Cowles. Thus the trip was arranged.

With the problem of the trip out of the way, Willkie finished his statement very rapidly. Experience had taught him that political editing made most statements quite meaningless in their caution. He did not show his handiwork even to his political allies. Instead, after taking the opinions of one or two advisers on style, he made it public forthwith.

AS A RESULT, in the crass terms of practical politics, Willkie is extremely likely to be "rolled" when the Republicans pick a new national chairman on March 15. Had he played the isolationists' and appeasers' game, he might well have used his huge national following to force a choice of his own. Had he simply kept his mouth shut, his enemies would probably have had to compromise with him. But placing national above factional interest is so strange to most practical politicians, both Democratic and Republican, that Willkie has probably put out of the running anyone he could support for the chairmanship.

In larger terms, however, he has vastly increased his stature. Much as they detest him, even the isolationists cannot doubt the disinterestedness of Willkie's action. As he has proven he can be generous and disinterested, he has gained force as a public figure—force which will be still further increased when he returns from Britain to submit an independent report on the facts of the war situation. While he may not have directly changed many votes in Congress, he has done the best possible service to his cause, by evoking an immense response from his friends all over the country. And Congress will be affected in the end, by the public opinion Willkie has so greatly helped to shape.

Fair Enough

They're Not Cattle

ONE TROUBLE about unemployment is there are two sides to every question, and if it was like you could just give them a job and they would take off their coat and go to work that would be one thing, but sometimes it works out the other way.

Like this guy, he comes around and says he is an elevator jockey, but they made him join the union because, otherwise, George Scalise's gorillas would picket the spot, so the boss says he can't stand the heat, because then the teamsters won't bring goods to and from the plant, so my friend, he joins the union. But he is an independent dummy, and so one day when the union agent comes around to put the bite on him for some tickets to a benefit for the boys my chum starts to denounce him fearlessly, and the ape says all right, that will cost him a saw for wilfully retarding the growth of the union by word, deed and example. Our boy doesn't want to pay, but it is warm in the elevator and cold outside, so he gathers up 10 bucks and pays the fine, but he is pretty sore, and he goes around with a brick in his hand trusting that some day he will draw a bead on Scalise or one of his baboons.

AS IT TURNS OUT, after a few months, Tom Dewey puts little George over a barrel and our friend comes blowing the whistle like Benny Goodman—only louder—and they send Scalise away to college, and our friend is full of cheer. By this time, however, he is a first-class private in the army of the unemployed, because he again retarded the growth of the union in this manner, and when you ask him what he holds he can only say, "no pair."

Well, when a guy is a standup guy like that and fights those baboons without protection and blows his job you want to help, so there is a big shot in the real estate thing, and he says he certainly will do his best to get him a job, as that courageous kind of citizenship should be encouraged. Some of these babs are plenty mean, especially against a poor loner with no influence, and, after a while, sure enough, what do you know? The real estate mugg calls up and says send our chum around: he thinks he can put him to work.

BY THIS TIME the monkey has checked out of his room, however, and it takes several hours chasing around town, but finally he is surrounded in a terrible old brownstone fleabag, where it smells in the hall like they don't bury their dead or don't even bother to put them in kipper.

Our boy certainly is in deep poverty from the look and smell of where he puts on the snore, but he is out of town just at present, so we chase him up by wire and tell him to scuffle on back and get in touch with Mr. So-and-So, and think no more about it until today.

Well, then, today Mr. So-and-So sends a note, and it seems he passed the word to a friend in the real estate thing, and this friend sends for the monkey and wants to put a suit on him and give him a job riding up and down. But does our boy swoon with delight to get off the street and establish relations with a pay roll? If you think so you are just leaping crazy.

FIRST, our boy demands to know who gives this company his name, and he is boiling mad because they have been messing in his private affairs, figuring that it is very humiliating to have to get blabbed around town, practically like it was on page one of all the papers, that he was out of work. Furthermore, he doesn't believe they have got this job for him, but thinks it is just a gag, and then he accuses the employment clerk of spying on him, because hardly anybody knows where he lives and, otherwise, how did they find out?

He is so indignant over this interference with his private life that by now the clerk turns him over to the superintendent, who explains again that they only want to give him a job in recognition of the way he practically took his life in his hands but he says he is a free man in a free country and nobody is going to go around spying on his private life—job or no job—so to hell with them and their elevator, and, anyway, he is practically deluged with offers, and it is just a question which one to take.

So, you see, sometimes to get the straight of it about unemployment you have to get the other side of the story, because people aren't just cattle but all kinds of individuals with pride and temperament, and you have to handle them just exactly right.

Presidential Anger

By Mark Sullivan

Reflections On Outburst

THE WRITER of this column was present when President Roosevelt denounced what Senator Wheeler had said. Mr. Roosevelt's superlatives of excoriation were very strong—"the most untruthful, the most dastardly, unpatriotic thing that has ever been said, . . . the rottenest thing that has been said in public life in my generation."

Mr. Roosevelt was very angry, apparently with a sustained anger, a thing that had been boiling within him and now exploded. Whether the explosion was incidental or calculated, cannot be said. The Wheeler incident had not been mentioned by any of the newspapermen at the press conference, it was Mr. Roosevelt who brought it up. He may have been spontaneously provoked to it by a general question having to do with the merits of the "lend-lease" measure. Or he may have come to the press conference intending to take advantage of any opportunity to denounce the statement that had angered him. It does not matter much, as respects the effect of what Mr. Roosevelt did.

MOST of the newspaper men reacted professionally—something sensational had happened. They busied themselves with getting the President's words exactly; and then one of them said, "Thank you, Mr. President," which is the formula for bringing a press conference to a close, so that they might hurry to telegraph wire and microphone with a startling statement by the President of the United States.

To the writer of this column, the reflection that came was something like this: If the President should ever get as angry against the head of a foreign government, as he now is at a domestic critic, and if he possessed the powers which the lend-lease bill would give him, something might happen. Even though the President might resist any temptation to use some of his powers to make his anger concretely effective, the head of a foreign government might not so understand. And even if the anger of a President toward a foreign government were confined to words, the foreign head of government might express his resentment concretely, which would mean war. The dictators have means of resentment not possessed by Senator Wheeler, and their resentment might have consequences not merely for Mr. Roosevelt, but for the American Nation.

ANOTHER reflection was: The President of the United States is one human being, having temper and temperament, as every human being has, in one degree or another. If any person whatever is for hours or days under the influence of the emotion Mr. Roosevelt showed at this press conference, the judgment of any person during the period of his emotion—his judgment on other matters far removed from the cause of his emotion—can hardly be as serene as it is desirable the judgment of a head of state should be at a time when important action is taken. And yet another reflection was: The present President of the United States might be succeeded some time by the new Vice President. And do we know enough about the temperament of Mr. Henry Wallace to feel sure it would be wise to entrust him with exercise, personal and arbitrary, of the powers contained in the lend-lease bill? It all comes down to the question whether the powers of the lend-lease bill should be put within the discretion of any one individual.

The answer is not to say the lend-lease bill is basically wrong. The American Nation, by an overwhelming public sentiment, wants to give Britain the help which the lend-lease bill expresses. Public sentiment wants to give to Britain and to Greece and China all the help possible that is short of war. But must we admit that we cannot devise any way of giving this help except by Congress enacting an immense grant of power, a blank check, and leaving the rest to the discretion of one man?

Admittedly, discretion is necessary, inevitable. The kind of help needed by Britain will change from day to day. The focusing of American industry will need to be changed repeatedly—at one time the urgent need will be planes, at another time ships. There will be constant need to allocate our help, among Britain, Greece and China. Emergencies impossible to foresee, the result of battle abroad, will call on us to change the destination of our help in a day, hurrying it sometimes to Britain, sometimes to the Mediterranean, sometimes to the Far East. The heads of Britain, Greece and China must change their strategy from day to day to offset changes of strategy by the Axis dictators, and we must correspondingly change the kind and direction of our help.

ALL THIS calls for day to day discretion on the part of the American source of help. But is it inescapable that this discretion must be exercised solely by one man—any one man, subject to the varying emotions, moods and judgments that every one man has? Is there no way to lodge this discretion in a group of at least three, whose judgments would correct each other?

This possibility must be considered among the other changes and limitations that will be made by Congress as it writes the new measure by the process of debate and amendment.

The Once Over

Dramatic Review Of A 1941 Income Tax Blank

"You Can't Take It With You" or "Tax Blank for 1941" has had its presentation before the American public, and, while it met with a mixed response, your reviewer would describe it as adequate. It is a straight, direct, merciless, tightly written affair which, despite muddling passages here and there, gets its message across. That, after all, is its purpose.

"Tax Blank for 1941" is in a sense a revival. It follows the pattern of other years but has been extensively rewritten, with many new lines and some startling effects, particularly that part of the narrative where it is discovered that Jonathan Q. Doe, our hero, supposing he gets the same exemption as in the past for being a married man, finds the exemption has been cut from $2,500 to $2,000. This is an obvious slap at matrimony, and, since it is a widely cherished institution, we do not think the authors have done a service to society by belittling it in this way.

A moment of high drama comes in a bleak scene laid in the Upper Brackets country. Here we have the same heavy mood of resentment, anger, pain and despair so characteristic in previous years.

Seldom has there been a more moving scene than when T. Dudley Softtouch and Luther Gettahead come face to face with Paragraph 6, Item 7, Page 4 and find that on the same income as they had last year they must now pay a supertax of almost twice as much. Here is action belonging to the sternest school of realism.

Perhaps the peak of emotion comes in a little scene where Softtouch, almost a mental wreck after having finally figured up what he owes the Government (with the help of six lawyers), is about to make out a check when he suddenly discovers that Congress has placed a separate defense tax of 10 per cent on top of all! For a moment this reviewer thought the performance had all the elements of a fusion of "Hellzapoppin" and "Macbeth." Screams penetrated the rafters and seldom have such lines as "They can't do that to me," "This is an outrage" and "It's that feller in the White House" been delivered with such power and feeling.

There is both drama and comedy in a later chapter when millions of Americans in the lower income group, who have been laughing at the upper groupers all these years, discover that at last they must come across too.

All in all (and that's the way they take it now), the production is sure to have the usual appeal, coupled with the additional response always occasioned by the surprise note. Your reviewer must say in all candor that "Tax Blank for 1941" lacks laughs. There is hardly an amusing line anywhere if you exclude the old gag, "Were you damaged by fire or storm during the last fiscal year?" But it is set for a run lasting through to the next December 15. Nothing can stop it.

On Hitler's doorplate in his old Munich home he is still listed as an author. And he appears to be the only author in history determined to kill off most of his customers.

Want Levels French Classes

This is the fourth of a series of uncensored articles about life in Nazi-conquered France by Betty Barzin, noted Belgian journalist who has just reached New York after spending six months among the rank and file of the French people.

New York, Jan. 15.—In the atmosphere created by the general want for all necessities of life, a new and strange democracy has arisen in France, a feminine democracy—for men are less concerned with the daily food and fuel struggle—which will leave a lasting imprint on the soul of the French people.

To stand day after day in endless food queues, whether for rationed or unrationed commodities, means constant mingling of all classes. Titled ladies now make friends with their butchers, their grocers, their bakers and their dairymen.

I know a French baroness who is an admirable bridge player. Years ago she told me: "When I play bridge all I want is a strong partner and an even stronger opponent. I don't care whether that partner or opponent be my coal merchant or my butcher. All I want is a really good game."

My smile, at the time, may have been somewhat ironic, for I knew the lady for a social snob of the worst type. She promptly added:

"Of course, you understand that I would not ask my butcher or coal merchant to tea or to dinner!"—

Grocers Become Important

It so happened that I met her again recently in a queue at the Toulouse Market. When her turn came at last, she asked for two pork chops in such a humble and apologetic way that I could not help reminding her of her former social prejudices.

She was greatly amused:.

"Why, I was a fool in those days; we all were fools. Butchers and grocers are the only people who really matter in life. It is good of them to treat us as they do. This decent fellow has given me twice 3 ounces plus the bone, bless him. I'll ask him to dinner—if he'll bring his own chop."

That same morning, I lined up for some cheese. In the queue was an old woman who grew nervous because the portions were diminishing rapidly.

When there were about 20 people in front of her, she complained:

"By the time my turn comes they will be gone; and I so much hoped to add one to the parcel I am sending to my grandson, who is a prisoner up north."

Her judgment proved correct, and as she was about to turn away a younger woman came up:

"Take this portion of cheese, I beg you. I can do without it. I have been extremely lucky this morning."

Strange Friendship

And she proudly produced a tablet of chocolate, a small packet of tea, and a tin of potted meat.

I shall never forget the hug the old lady gave her. I met both of them several times. Often they would come to the market together. And the younger woman helped the older carry her purchases. A strange friendship had sprung up. And yet, one spoke with a strong southern peasant brogue and the other had the accent of the most select Parisian drawing room.

Among the numerous friends I made at the Toulouse market, was a most talkative and amusing woman who kept a grocery stand.

Her husband and her two sons had been in the fighting zone. For many weeks, she had been most anxious, and all her customers shared her worry.

Then one day she heard that her sons were prisoners somewhere in Belgium. And their father was not far from them.

By way of celebration, Mme. Brousse added just a little weight here and there ("if the police interfere, I'll soon get them to forgive me, for this is not just an ordinary day," she said), and her customers offered to do without a little something or other so that Mme. Brousse might add a few things to the parcels she was about to send off to her beloved prisoners.

Mme. Brousse made notes while packing her precious parcels, and asked for the names and addresses of those of us whom she did not know personally. We wondered why.

"One has to register for everything nowadays. The authorities are becoming so trying," she said.

We forgot about it but a couple of days later, outside Mme. Brousse's grocery stand, there was fresh excitement. The good lady was full of mirth and more talkative than ever. Checking a list of names, she looked like a general about to distribute honors on the battlefield.

"Mme. la Comtesse, you were so kind as to do without some of your sugar the other day. I have something for you here," she said superbly.

And a most distinguished-looking old lady was presented with a small package of flaked corn which she received with torrents of thanks.

The owner of the largest furniture shop in Toulouse was honored with a small tin of sardines. Others were given cream cheese, or biscuits, or washing powder, and in every case, Mme. Brousse, with unfailing judgment, had chosen the very thing her customers were most in need of.

I was the happy recipient of 5 grams of Ceylon tea, and nothing could have given me greater joy at the time.

Mme. Brousse was not my only grocer friend. There was the owner of a large stand bearing the pompous name of "Etoile de l'Ariege," who had her own way of interpreting government regulations.

Logic Versus Authorities

One morning she stunned her customers by stating that she was selling 500 grams of margarine against a 200-gram ration ticket. She explained:

"The government allows us 200 grams of fat every fortnight. Now I know that margarine is not pure vegetable fat. My son is a chemist. I got him to analyze this stuff, and he has come to the conclusion that only two-fifths of it may be compared in fat content to, say, pure olive oil.

"People who buy margarine do so because they cannot afford the expensive olive oil. Why should they be deprived of their fat ration?"

Everybody agreed that her reasoning was sound but the authorities stepped in one day. She was called before the magistrate and the stand was closed. When it opened again, there was no margarine on sale.

We all assumed that madame had been fined. She did not tell us. She merely stated that she had given up selling anything, in the fats line, but olive oil.

"Never mind," said an old peasant woman. "We have benefited for many days from her logic and from her son's knowledge of chemistry. I, for one, will buy all I can from her in the future."

37 in a Bed Too Many; Husband Gets Divorce

Dedham, Mass., Jan. 15 (AP).—His wife's affection—for pets—won William A. Feeley a divorce today.

Feeley testified he was married in 1930, but that his wife, Helen, left him 11 days later, not to return until 1938, when she installed in their home six cats and four dogs.

All the pets insisted upon sleeping at the foot of his bed, and when they multiplied to 17 cats and 19 dogs, he testified, "they left me very little room."

London, Jan. 15 (AP).—Vice Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham, commander in chief of the British Mediterranean Fleet, and Vice Admiral Sir Max Horton, head of the British submarine service, have been promoted to the rank of admiral, the admiralty announced tonight. Cunningham had been an active admiral.

Several hundred $2 tickets are still available, he said, also a limited number in the higher brackets. Tickets selling at $2.50, $3, $5, $6 and $7 are all gone, he declared.

Thirty workers, several of them volunteers, toiled until 9:30 last night on the payday rush, filling telephone and mail orders, handling counter customers and assorting a flood of application cards. Most of the personnel, like Chairman Hildreth, are veterans of the two previous Roosevelt inaugurations.

It was Dorothy Thompson, chairman of the national participation committee, who disclosed last night Pittsburgh's plans to stage its own inaugural celebration. In his proclamation, Mayor Scully held January 20 to be "a day of national unity and an opportunity for all citizens to rededicate themselves to the preservation of American democracy."

The western Pennsylvania metropolis will be the scene of an inaugural parade and special exercises will be held in the public schools. The occasion will even be observed in the municipal jail, where patriotic ceremonies and a special menu are scheduled, Miss Thompson was informed.

At hotels, newsstands and elsewhere, as well as at ticket headquarters, the souvenir program went on sale yesterday at 50 cents a copy. Those wishing the de luxe edition, bound in leather and with the owner's name stamped thereon, may order it for $2.

The bronze medal which goes on sale today is somewhat larger than a 50-cent piece, costs $1. If mailed, 10 cents is added for postage.

Col. Edwin A. Halsey, Secretary of the Senate, consulted yesterday with the President on final arrangements for the oath-taking. The former said Vice President-elect Wallace will take the oath from Vice President Garner immediately before the swearing in of President Roosevelt by Chief Justice Hughes.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. announced it will place four mobile pay stations in operation on Inaugural Day. They will be stationed in Lafayette Square, north of the Commerce Building, at Ninth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue and in the Capitol Grounds.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 15.

AFFECTION: Russel Crouse and Alison Smith have in their household a number of pet cats. But "Miss Frothingham" is their favorite. They have a scrapbook containing all the newspaper clippings about her. And at the premiere of each show in which Crouse has an interest he always receives an opening night wire from "Miss Frothingham" . . . At last week's premiere of "Arsenic and Old Lace," the new hit produced by Lindsay and Crouse, he received this wire from the cat: "Tell me if it's a hit. Curiosity is almost killing me.

LYONS

LESSON: Shortly before the first performance of Elmer Rice's "Flight to the West" Hugh Marlowe suggested to Boris Marshalov, the dramatic coach, who is a member of the cast, that one of the lines be read differently. Marlowe told him to try the new reading at rehearsals instead of waiting until he could get an audience reaction . . . "In Russia we have a proverb," Marshalov explained, rejecting the suggestion. "A proverb: 'I never feed my dogs before I go hunting.'"

ENTERPRISE: Ben Hecht, who is writing a New York column for PM, has contracted to write it for at least one year. He has 20 columns written in advance . . . Hecht employs one leg-man to bring the stories of the town to him . . . He tells his friends that, although he can be the highest-priced writer in Hollywood, this is the job he really prefers . . . Hecht almost signed a film contract with M. G. M., but L. B. Mayer insisted that Ben first apologize for a poem he had written about Mayer three years ago. "I would have apologized if I had no money," he confesses, "but I have money, and so I refused" . . . Thus the column was born.

AMITY: Leopold Stokowski, who makes recordings for Columbia—although RCA-Victor has been trying to sign him—went to a party at the Philadelphia home of Meyer Davis last week. He brought with him two officials of Columbia . . . Just as Stokowski was preparing a drink he noticed two other guests arriving—two officials of RCA-Victor . . . "A toast," Stokowski proposed, lifting his glass. "A toast—to RCA-Columbia."

EXAMPLE: Ed Gardner, director of the Rudy Vallee program, was instructed by Rudy to phone him whenever any problem arose . . . "Don't forget," Vallee reminded. "Call me at any time" . . . "But that may be impossible," Gardner suggested. "Suppose you're up at your camp in Maine and I'm out here in California. Wouldn't I have trouble in getting to you?" . . . "Call me," Vallee stated. "After all—Bullitt reached the President each time, didn't he?"

POLITICS: Milton Berle, who returned from Hollywood this week, was to have participated at the opening ceremonies of the new race track in California. Gov. Culbert L. Olson was to officiate . . . The opening was postponed because of a five-day rain, which made the track too muddy. "Just how much mud is there at the track?" Berle asked Gov. Olson . . . "There's so much mud," he replied, "almost enough to start another anti-Roosevelt campaign."

QUERY: When Mrs. Oscar Levant was taken to the hospital for the arrival of her baby Oscar paced the corridors until, exhausted, he fell asleep in one of the armchairs . . . A nurse, bringing the happy tidings, found the new father dozing. She shook him until he awoke and said: "It's a girl, Mr. Levant. A girl" . . . "A girl?" answered Oscar, drowsily. "What's her name?"

WARNING: A song plugger who returned from Washington last week-end told his colleagues that he was one of those privileged to see the President make his opening address to Congress, which was broadcast through all the hookups . . . "How'd you feel," he was asked, "when you saw Roosevelt step up to the microphones?" . . . "I felt, like warning him," said the song plugger. "Remember now—no whistling any bars of ASCAP music."

CHANGE: William Saroyan told an aspiring writer: "All our forms are now and hereafter obsolete, and it is simply a question of time how long it is going to take art and society to find out. The texture and tempo of energy and behavior has changed. The old-style play is doomed. For drama must meet this change" . . . "And what," asked the puzzled young listener, "are you doing out here in Frisco, now?" . . . "I am out here, Saroyan confessed, heaving with responsibility, "to figure out, personally, how best that change shall be negotiated."

TIME: Frank Vreeland, the drama critic and editor of the new humor magazine, TNT, finds great irony in the fact that P. G. Wodehouse now is a prisoner of the Germans—and writing his new novel in their custody—after having written a novel through the last war . . . Wodehouse was in New York at the beginning of the World War and found that his literary reputation at last was being established . . . He was engulfed by so many orders from editors and producers for stories and plays that his secretary placed in front of his typewriter a schedule showing the dates when his novel was due, when the next short story was expected and when his play was to be completed . . . Mrs. Wodehouse, who did ambulance work in England, arrived and found him working diligently at his typewriter . . . "We're at war," she reminded. "Shouldn't you go over and lend a hand?" . . . Wodehouse interrupted his typing, looked at his schedule and said, "I can let them have two weeks next August."

Columbia

Still the timely reflection of the front pages it was when it appeared on the Capitol screen several weeks ago, "Flight Command" returns to F Street this morning for an engagement at the Columbia Theater.

This is the M-G-M picturization of America's sky-fighters, filmed with the cooperation of the Navy Department. Despite the names of Robert Taylor, Walter Pidgeon, Paul Kelly, Ruth Hussey and Sheppard Strudwick, it's the Navy Department's work that makes "Flight Command" something more than just another air picture."

The story of a newcomer to one of the Navy's most daring squadrons gives dramatic license to a training period for the airmen. Landing and taking off from an airplane carrier in the Pacific, formation flying and the battle line of fog are some of the technical fascinations that the camera makes far more real than wordage ever has.

There are, too, the schooling tests that squadrons make as a unit, aiming at moving targets and demanding feather-like control. There is the unswerving discipline which demands a pilot to abandon a plane because men are of surpassing value to a machine.

But there is a story to "Flight Command" which gains the cameras' attention. It details the unjust suspicions on the part of his fellow pilots when Taylor is thought to be carrying on a romance with the commander's wife.

Little

"Pastor Hall's" continuance for a second week at the Little Theater brings up the question of that much-abused word, "Propaganda."

What is propaganda, anyway? Is it propaganda to tell a story of a man's insistence on individual freedom of thought, of actions, of beliefs? Is it propaganda to depict the cruelty, destruction, death which rewards the strugglers against national, religious, racial intolerance that for a time seems the master? Is it propaganda to try to win sympathy, even help, for defenders of freedom against physical, mental and moral slavery?

For that is frankly what "Pastor Hall" does. It is the story of Bishop Martin Niemoller, whose defiance of the Hitler regime made the headlines before this cataclysmic present. Pastor Hall is a man well loved by his fellow townsmen, Christians and Hebrews alike. When the Storm Troopers take over, he is one of the first whose help they seek.

Through his personal attachments they attack him after he has refused to play their game. When, finally, the choice comes between his beliefs, he chooses martyrdom to slavery.

In telling such a story, the British film-makers have made no attempts at native restraint.

Wilfred Lawson is superb in the title role. Nova Pilbeam, Sir Seymour Hicks and Marius Goring head the supporting cast. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt makes a brief talk as a foreword to this, her son, James' first venture as a producer.

Army Expected To Reject 33⅓ Pct. In Physical Tests

Public Health Service experts estimated yesterday that, on the basis of World War conscription experience, one-third of the men called up for examination by draft boards will be rejected because of physical defects.

Reanalyzing certain results of the medical findings for the 1917-18 draft, Rollo H. Britten and George St. J. Perrott found that 21 per cent were rejected outright, 31 per cent were held to be unavailable for general military service (including the rejections) and 52 per cent had one or more recorded defects.

Britten is senior statistician of the Public Health Service and Perrott is chief of the public health methods division.

"One might expect," they said, "that, to meet the quota of 800,000 inducted men by July 1, 1941, 1,200,000 would have to be examined and thus" that about 400,000 would not be available for general military service."

Contract Bridge

Let's see how well you can manage the doubling situation presented for today's hand.

♠ A K Q 2
♡ 9 7 3
◇ 8 6 4 2
♣ 10 5

Te bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
	Goren
1 NT	Dble	Pass	?

What call do you make with the South cards?

Answer: Make a penalty pass of the one no-trump. The set looks promising and your four spades will help partner's high card tricks considerably. Don't bid two spades as the set looks more profitable.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Ashley wanted to surrender to her charms—but he could never forget that Scarlett belonged to another!

Rhett turns to Belle Watling for consolation and understanding . . . scorned though she is by the "respectable" folks of the city.

Mr. DeMille Goes Tricky In His Latest Picture

'Northwest Mounted Police' Reverses Axiom; Cornell to Play Shaw's 'Doctor's Dilemma;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

A SLY FELLOW, this Cecil B. DeMille. Has a sense of humor and all that sort of thing. For example, in "North West Mounted Police," uncorked yesterday in all its Technicolor splendor to fill the eye of the writing tribe, Mr. DeMille engineers his melodramatic pageantry in such a manner as to permit the Mountie to "get his girl," but the Texas Ranger to "get his man." This is not precisely the way a great many will wish the fable might come out, but there it is.

BELL

It is quite a picture that Mr. DeMille has contrived here and quite a cast he has assembled to bring it to life—Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Preston Foster, Paulette Goddard, Robert Preston, Walter Hampden, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Montagu Love, George Bancroft, Willard Robertson, George E. Stone, Francis McDonald and all the rest. And those red coats the mounties wear as targets for the Canadian halfbreeds, who are in revolt against Her Majesty's government—this was all back in Queen Victoria's time—were, of course, made to order for the Technicolor cameras.

We will get around to reviewing the picture, come the day it opens on the screen at the Earle—which would be tomorrow—so, as they say in "The Mikado," long life to you 'til then.

If a piece of art manages to squeeze itself in on this page today, it should be in the form of a likeness of Deanna Durbin, "Aunty Deanna," who, to the best of our nebulous knowledge and hazy belief, is the first of the major screen stars to designate a definite time for her arrival in Washington to participate in the full roster of events scheduled for the President's Birthday Celebrations. Miss Durbin and her entourage will arrive in the Capital on Tuesday morning, January 28. The costume department at Universal has cooperated with its major star to the extent of building her a Birthday Ball gown that is said to have cost $1,000. Deanna would be an addition to any party dressed in sackcloth and ashes.

As long as we are on the subject, it might as well be divulged now as any time that tickets for the socalled "command performance" of "Old Acquaintance," costarring Jane Cowl and Peggy Wood, at the National Theater, Sunday night, January 26, will go on sale at the theater box-office tomorrow morning. The President's Birthday entertainment committee has instructed Treasurer Eddie Keller, of the National, to place all the tickets in the racks, available to box-office patrons without reservation of any for "special purposes." Prices for this single performance will range from $1.50 to $5. As already announced, John Van Druten, author of "Old Acquaintance," plans to be present to see his play. Arrangements are being made for a Sunday afternoon tea and reception for the stars and members of the cast before the evening performance.

Katharine Cornell, after due deliberation, has made up her mind. She will present George Bernard Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma" as her first production of the season. A cable from the playwright in London flashes the green light on her plans and rehearsals will begin as soon as the supporting players can be secured. Guthrie McClintic, Miss Cornell's husband in private life, will direct. Her schedule calls for a preliminary tour of three weeks before opening the play in New York. Washington included, Miss Cornell? Or wouldn't you know?

Special midnight performances will be presented at the Earle, Metropolitan and nine Warner neighborhood houses during the inaugural week-end. The Earle and Met. will offer late shows on both Saturday and Sunday, January 18 and 19, beginning at 11:30 p. m. On the same dates midnight bills will be presented at the Ambassador, Beverly, Central, Penn, Sheridan, Tivoli and Uptown theaters. The Calvert and Silver will offer midnight shows on Sunday, January 19, only. On that day, incidentally, the Central will go on a 24-hour schedule, remaining open all night. No advance in prices at any of them.

The Atlas Theater is breaking out its stage bills again. On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday next, Granpappy and His Pine Ridge Hillbillie Revue will be snatched off the airways to make fun for the patrons of the popular Northeast house. The double-feature screen bill for these days will be comprised of "Hit Parade of 1941" and "Youth Will Be Served"—which seems to be the main idea of the whole program.

And-Fevven's-Sake-When-Not Note

RKO-Keith's

Following in the footsteps of its elder, between-the-book-covers sister, "Kitty Foyle" has entered a best-selling career on the screen. With Ginger Rogers as the celebrated "white collar" heroine of Christopher Morley's novel, the film is now in its third week at RKO-Keith's.

Little remains to be written of "Kitty Foyle." It has already been widely remarked that Ginger Rogers is the one and only Kitty, a perfect natural for that sincere character. Is it necessary to remind the reader that "Kitty Foyle's" adventures are those of a Philadelphia Irish lass who falls in love with a boy of the upper classes and learns to get over it?

Dennis Morgan seems somewhat miscast as the high-toned chap and James Craig is certainly not the doctor Mr. Morley's book described, but the resulting film is a warming and sincere relation of the original. And Ginger Rogers' Kitty is someone you'll not soon forget.

To Be Here for the 'Whole Show'

DEANNA DURBIN,

"queen" of the Universal lot, who has signified her intention to arrive in Washington on Tuesday, January 28, in order to be present for all of the functions planned for the observance of the President's Birthday Celebrations on and before January 30. Miss Durbin, it should be remembered, has starred in eight pictures—all box-office hits

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 15.

'Tis the season of year when our producers think of only two things—well, let's say two plus: The races at Santa Anita and Academy Awards. They dream of those awards. And at this particular time, they don't seem to realize that they're still making pictures for Mr. and Mrs. John Public, until suddenly they see those little red figures in a big black ledger. That's why I was glad to hear Producer Erich Pommer say the other day, "We didn't make 'Dance, Girl, Dance' for an award. It was just a light, human story, tailor-made for a couple of kids—Lucille Ball and Maureen O'Hara. Because these girls, along with others, will be our important stars tomorrow. It's pretty tough on the kids these days. There's such strong competition from big names, some of which have been with us a long time."

HOPPER

Twentieth Century now gives you the bird over the telephone, instead of the news. Of course, it's a gag, but they really have a minah bird from Hawaii who says, "Hello, how are you?" and then "Oh, nuts!" It makes the day a little brighter—and more confusing.

Vicki Baum and Greg La Cava were giving the script of "Unfinished Business" a going-over, and at their first meeting, Vicki got very excited over script's faults. After an hour of pointing them out, she noticed Greg's secretary was taking down every word she said. She suddenly stopped and said, "See here, I'm not getting paid for this." "Oh, yes you are," said Greg. "You went on salary after the second paragraph. Just keep on."

Not so long ago, Jack Oakie was getting $25 a week in a Shubert chorus. He was fired because he got bored with the antics of the star, and started giving an imitation of him while standing behind him—which brought the house down. Then Jack came into pictures—you all know what he's done here. Now Shuberts are trying to get him back to star on Broadway. Oakie's asking $5,000 a week.

Jimmy Roosevelts' coproducer, Henry Henigson, just can't keep off the set while those luscious beauties are rehearsing a hot Conga on "Pot o' Gold" set. Yesterday Henry got so het up he pushed one of the girl's partners aside, grabbed her himself, and went into the routine . . . After seeing a sneak preview of "High Sierra," in which the climax happens on the top of a hill, a wag dubbed it "Hillzapoppin."

Twentieth Century and Warners are fighting over the services of Ida Lupino, which is an enviable position to be in. Warners want her for "Gentle People," in which she'll have one of the finest parts of the year.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 15 (INS).—If you don't believe that 1941 is to be a musical comedy year, listen to this: Jack Warner will spend $1,200,000 on "Navy Blues," the first musical comedy that has come from Warners studio in four years. Personally, I think Jack will have to spend even more with Cole Porter all but set to write the sophisticated ditties. Cole doesn't work for peanuts and his stock has gone up since the success of "Panama Hattie." Then, too, I hear, entre nous, that Sam Wood, one of our best directors (who also gets a big salary) will direct.

PARSONS

Jack Haley was added to the cast of "Navy Blues" today. He will share the comedy spotlight with Eddie Albert and Jack Oakie.

Max Gordon is disregarding all offers made him to sell the film rights to the New York stage hit, "My Sister, Eileen." He wants to produce it himself and he will form a producing unit of his own which will include Joe Fields and Jerry Chodorov, writers. Gordon would be very wise to align himself with one of the big companies with extensive releasing facilities and theaters if his picture is good at all—and there is no reason why it shouldn't be, for he is an experienced producer of stage plays.

Louise Fazenda and Hal Wallis are journeying to Washington to attend the President's inaugural luncheon. And while in the East, they will visit New York. Hal's purpose is to look over twelve unknowns who have been tested by Warners New York office for "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "George Washington Slept Here." Warners believe, because of the value of these two stage properties, it is possible to cast them with unknown people who, because of the importance of the two pictures, would thereby have an auspicious introduction to the public.

Hal Roach has invited me to take a look at Marjorie Woodworth, daughter of the city attorney of Inglewood and a young lady, he believes, will make a name for herself on the screen. Marjorie was born 10 miles from the Roach studio, in Culver City, and has always had movie ambitions. A year ago, when Hal signed her on a contract and since that time, she has been studying with dramatic teachers. Both Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Fred Astaire are enthusiastic over her possibilities. She will start playing leads, which may or may not be the right way to introduce a newcomer.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Burgess Meredith told me at the George Cukor cocktail party that Marlene Dietrich is so beautiful he wishes all the other women in the world looked like her. Probably Eric Remarque feels the same way, for I am told the emeralds he gave her for Christmas are something to see; Laird Cregar won a John Fredericks hat at the Mocambo sweepstakes and it didn't make his wife a bit mad; Kay Sutton won the grand prize of a Trabert and Hoeffer bracelet; John Warburton, the actor, became a grandfather today when his daughter, Norma Shepherd, gave birth to a daughter at the Good Samaritan Hospital.

Rudy Vallee, at long last, met Gene Tierney and celebrated the meeting by taking her to Charlie Foy's Supper Club; Mischa Auer's celebration of the Russian new year at the Scheherazade turned into a birthday party; Kay Francis, Mrs. Ralph Bellamy and Mrs. Frank Tuttle, all celebrating their natal days, were given cakes. So were Pat Morison's parents, who were at the Russian new year with her, because it was their twenty-eighth wedding anniversary; the Gary Coopers and a few friends saw "Meet John Doe" at a dinner party at the Frank Capras. Gary said it was the first time he could stand to look at himself on the screen; Claudette Colbert once again proved her prowess as a skier when she wrested honors from two hundred other contestants at Sun Valley.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In the Mannish Style

The sailor is headed for a busy season this spring. It will be especially popular in modified tailored versions. Bretons, too, are slated for success and will be more important than ever. Women who like a mannish touch will wear these tailored styles with their sport clothes and costume suits. The all-over Glenurquhart plaid pattern on the gay Dobbs sailor, right, makes a perfect match mate for the new checked and plaid suits this spring. At left, the dashing profile Breton has a different sophisticated look that goes perfectly with spectator costumes.

Milk an Aid In Diets Aimed At Reducing

A sensible way to weight reduction without omitting foods the body requires is to include a pint of milk a day in a well-balanced, low-calorie diet. By substituting bulky foods, such as lettuce and cabbage, for the concentrated foods, the size of the meals appears to be about the same, although the calorie intake is less.

Dr. Clara Taylor, of Columbia, University says: "No one food takes as important a place in the reducing diet as milk. At least two glasses of milk should be included each day." Part of the milk may be included in soups or in desserts such as custards or milk puddings.

Green leafy vegetables may be eaten to the heart's content, and a potato every day is not too much, says Dr. Taylor. Fruits, fruit juices, meat or fish, and eggs round out the daily diet and make it possible to plan satisfying meals, low in calories.

That it is better to be thin than fat for a long life is the lesson deduced from recent diet experiments by Dr. C. M. McCay, of Cornell University. By feeding white rats a diet containing all needed substances for growth and health, but low in calories, Dr. McCay found that rats live longer and have fewer diseases than rats on a normal higher calorie diet.

Backs of Arms Need Exercise; Housework Won't Do the Trick

By Ida Jean Kain

HAVING looked the field over during the holiday festivities, it seems obvious that what most women need is either special arm exercise or sleeves. Arms just aren't as pretty as they should be. Instead of being firm, the backs of the upper arms are soft and flabby.

See for yourself! Stand before a mirror with the bare arm straight out, shoulder-level. What happens to the flesh on the under side of the upper arm? This contour should be firm and round. If it is pendulous, you need exercise.

It isn't that the arms don't get enough work. They get plenty in housework. But those particular muscles, the triceps, seem to have gone out of commission with the back porch pump. Most of the every-day activities call for the biceps, which are on the front of the arms.

Of course, sports use these muscles. But how many sports do you do? Well, the alternative is special arm exercise.

Punching Bag Advised

The ideal exercise would be to have a punching bag and punch away with the arms held out at shoulder level. If you are going into training for a beautiful figure, it would pay you to get one. A good makeshift, however, is to suspend an ordinary pillow or an old sofa pillow in a doorway and punch away for dear life. It's better than shadow boxing.

And here's an exercise any one can do:

Stand with chest and arms against a wall, and, using the muscles of the arms, push away from the wall. Then, resisting with the arm muscles, touch chest to wall again. Be careful in doing this exercise not to let the small of the back sink in or it will give you a sway back. Keep the abdominal muscles pulled up and in, the back straight, and the hips tucked under and you have a streamlining exercise to boot.

You can work out your own routine. Any exercise in which there is a thrusting motion tones the triceps. Or any arm exercise taken with the arms out at shoulder level effectively uses the muscles—the rule is to have the arms more horizontal than in perpendicular. Just standing with the arms in this position and shaking them vigorously is a good stunt. Gilda Grey, the old-time shimmy artist, has truly beautiful arms.

Touch Arms in Back

Circles, swoops and swings will all help you to get back your grip.

In swinging, try to touch the arms together in back—that will straighten you right out.

If you are really good, you might try the exercise of lying face downward on the floor, hands on floor in front of chest, and by sheer muscle power hoist yourself up until arms are straight. If you can do that one, chances are you have beautiful arms anyway.

Toast to the 'Poor'

I

Here's to all the poor Annies and Mabels and Luties,

Whose names people always forget, who stand in the corner at parties,

Who wear last year's coat another year so that someone else may look smarter,

Who get the worst seats at the luncheons and dinners because they will not raise a rumpus,

Who are walked over in offices because they will not "get down and fight in the gutter,"

II

Here's to all the poor Ellas, and Hatties and Lizzies,

Who squeeze the lemons for the club punch and clean up the debris after the reception,

Who serve on the ways and means committees, who do the telephoning and the checking,

Who haul the junk to rummage sales and do the work of women who have to go to the dentist or doctor,

Who collect the contributions for gifts, who do the buying and wrapping and make up the shortage,

Who are the first to be called on the telephone when a task demands a "dependable" woman.

III

Here's to all the poor Lillies and Evas and Claras,

Who are nice to wallflowers and bores at a party and get passed over by bigwigs,

Who scrupulously write bread and butter notes and send thanks for Christmas cards unexpected,

Who take time to remember people in hospitals, who go out of the way to be kind to the aged,

Who draw forgotten women into groups, who listen patiently to the longwinded,

Who are the last to board street cars and buses in jams, or to get to the table for sandwiches.

IV

Here's to all the poor Nellies and Gracies and Maggies.

Who patiently fulfill the duties of needed fifth wheels in households of others,

Who stay home and take care of the old folk, who educate nephews and nieces.

Who do the cooking and cleaning for family reunions, who serve at relatives' bedsides,

Who entertain guests others choose, who go places of others' selections,

Yet who never so much as whimper "Poor me!" when doors close in every direction.

V

Here's to all the "poor" women, the Abigails down to the Zinnias.

Who still know the meaning of obligation, kindness and honor,

Who still carry on the feminine tradition of gentility, grace and politeness,

Who get pushed and shoved by the assertive, the loud, and the shoddy,

But who yet are acclaimed in that small secret league of the soul's aristocracy,

As being the ornaments of womanhood and the world's truly great ladies.

Know Vitamins For Health Sake

BUBBLING HEALTH! Such a treasure you would give to your own child, that he might be a happy adult, keeping his youth, his energy.

And today we are learning what a vital part vitamins play in such health. We can get, too, in simple form information on the foods which give enough vitamins.

So often the "choosy" child—and the adult, too—deprives himself of essential vitamin-high foods. Your youngster, graduated from baby care and dining at the family table, decides he likes "more'n anything" some one food.

It may be apple sauce, canned peas or lean meat well cooked—well enough as one dish on his menu, but if he eats of it too heartily he hasn't "enough room" for his vitamin-highs!

When you know vitamin values you easily guide him into better eating habits. A growing youngster needs vitamins in plenty, of Vitamins A and B he needs more than adults do—and fortunately you needn't put your child on a rigid diet to be sure he gets his share.

Vitamin A, so important to growth, is supplied generously by egg yolk, butter and cheese, by all green and yellow vegetables and fruits. Among the rich sources of Vitamin B, are milk, whole wheat bread and whole wheat cereals—and there are lots of others.

You have a choice, too, of many foods containing Vitamin C, but for D, the antirickets vitamin, the chief source is cod liver oil.

Then, do you know cooking methods that retain vitamins? Get authoritative vitamin information from our 40-page booklet, "Vitamins for Health and Beauty." Tells what vitamins will do for you, what foods are rich in them. Gives vitamin-high menus, pointers on cooking to retain vitamins. Also has important facts on minerals.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Vitamins for Health and Beauty," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and name of booklet.

Having Found 'A Degree of Indifference' Most Effective With Women, Self-Made Man Hesitates to Tell Wealthy Girl That He Truly Loves Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man in my late twenties and have been in Washington for about a year. It has been my good fortune to have made a substantial number of friends—particularly of the opposite sex. My experience has been that a relative degree of indifference in dealing with women is most effective.

Last summer, I met a girl who lives in one of the large Eastern cities and is in her last year at college. Her family is very wealthy and has social position. My family, on the other hand, are very poor farmers in the West. Through my own efforts, I graduated from one of the best Eastern universities and this, combined with what I have been told is a high degree of physical attractiveness, has made for my popularity. I have a good position and an excellent future.

This girl is 22 but has led a very sheltered life. She knows nothing of my background but seems genuinely attracted to me. We correspond regularly. I have had dinner at her home a number of times, have met her family and have taken her out at every opportunity. Because of distance, however, we have not been together more than a dozen times.

I am very deeply and genuinely in love with the girl—and not with her financial and social rating. However, I have not shown that I am in love, principally because I feel that, since we are so far apart geographically, she might lose interest in me, were the zest of the "chase" removed. Our relationship has been on a "platonic" basis; and this, together with the fact that we have seen each other so infrequently, leads me to feel that perhaps it is merely wishful thinking on my part even to entertain the idea that a confession of my love would not be totally inappropriate—and that such an admission might lead to a complete breakdown of the entire relationship. Will you please advise me? Yours very truly, R. K.

Odds Are in Favor Of Candid Courtship

DEAR R. K.: When weighing the pros and cons of this type of problem I am always reminded of a philosophical observation penned in the seventeenth century by one Marquis of Montrose—who wrote: "He either fears his fate too much, Or his deserts are small, That dares not put it to the touch, To gain or lose it all."

While you may think to hold the girl's attention by keeping her guessing about the extent of your interest and the nature of your intentions, the chances are exactly fifty-fifty that, just because she doesn't know what is in your mind and heart, her attion may fix upon—or be captured by—another more available and more ardently articulate suitor. In her last year at college, and 22 years of age, she is undoubtedly absorbed—unconsciously, if not consciously—in at least speculative thoughts of marriage as the next major development in her personal evolution.

In her position, with its natural and also easily manufactured opportunities for meeting many eligible young men (most of whom probably would find her as attractive as you do), it isn't likely that she would reserve a permanently hopeful place in her thoughts for one young man, living at a distance, who sees her but seldom and then poses as a deliberately "unknown quantity." A brave declaration of "genuine love" and matrimonial aspiration on his part is far better calculated to "fix" him in her imagination; to earn for him a special place in her social program, than is the studied implication of "a degree of indifference" — indefinitely registered.

When thinking of marriage (as most girls do, off and on, from their teens until eventually they reach the altar), any normal girl involuntarily reviews a list of imaginary or potential husbands, and, in the case of a popular girl, the man who emerges winner in the race for her hand is the man who manages to dominate the landscape of her imagination, as much by his persistent availability as by his romantic, social and economic desirability.

It has been said that, in matters of love, women are the realists and men the sentimentalists or romanticists. In the main, I believe this is true. Emotionally poised and socially well adjusted young women—those who are casually accustomed to a sufficiency of affection, approval, security and companionship—are much more likely to choose, as a husband, the best of the goods the gods provide, than to (a) "run after" an elusive male; or (b) wait wistfully and indefinitely for Perfection to arrive.

So, if you stand a Chinaman's chance with the girl, you will be strengthening, rather than weakening, that chance in making your hopes and feelings known to her. In my opinion, an honorable declaration of genuine love for a fellow being can never be "totally inappropriate"—since it is the highest tribute one person can pay another. And whether the girl loves you or whehter she doesn't, whether she encourages or discourages your hopes—still, she cannot but be sensible of the honor you pay her, in declaring yourself, and properly appreciative of your manliness in doing so.

It is foolish to let fear that "such an admission might lead to a complete breakdown of the relationship," keep you tongue-tied and pretending. It is far better to know the worst at first, than to remain on the rack for lack of courage to face the truth. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Hearty Food That Sticks to the Ribs

If the snappy days we are experiencing make you look around for dishes that are as husky as the family's appetites, look to spareribs as the answer. And if you want a "dressed up" spareribs and cabbage dinner, a crown roast of ribs with red cabbage is a delightful change. That is a dish that really sticks to the ribs. The family will be sure to polish up their plates and call for seconds. Make it this way:

Spareribs Crown Roast

Have two pieces of spareribs trimmed into neat oblongs and sewed together at the ends to make a circle. Roast uncovered at 350 degrees for 1 hour. Prepare the cabbage as follows:

Shred 1 head red cabbage, slice thin 2 tart apples. Add 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon salt and 3 cups boiling water and cook for 10 minutes uncovered. Drain, reserving liquid for making gravy. Add ¼-cup sugar, ¾-cup pork drippings taken from the roasting pan and 1 cup sour cream. Cook slowly for 5 minutes. Remove meat from oven and form into a crown. Fill with cabbage and surround with baked halves of sweet potatoes.

First Lady Receives Board Of G. F. W. C. at White House

Discipline Necessary In Home Defense, Club Women Told

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Women serving as volunteers in any part of the home defense program "cannot say, I'll do such and such—and tomorrow go to Florida. Discipline will be required," Mrs. Roosevelt told members of the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday.

Talking informally to the women whom she received at tea at the White House, the First Lady reviewed the steps leading up to recommendations for women's part in national defense made in the proposal submitted by Mrs. Florence Kerr, deputy WPA Administrator, and now in the hands of a small committee appointed by the President.

"I hope, when it comes out, it will be very simple and very flexible," she said, "offering all the kinds of training that can be thought of."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she believed the service should be all volunteer except for one paid person at the head of the whole thing for general Government supervision and one paid executive in each State, to get the volunteers together. "This means that the people of this country will have to want to do it very much and I think they do," she added.

She said it would require "coordination of every existing agency and pulling together in every community," and was a program not alone for the women but to include boys and older men, all of whom could give valuable aid in a total home defense organization.

Because the service would be voluntary and regulated by each community under a decentralized plan, she said she believed it could not properly be classified as regimentation although this charge might be brought wherever discipline was required.

To the question of Dr. Josephine L. Peirce, of Lima, Ohio, federation chairman of the department of the American home, as to the possibility of a home defense program producing a war psychology in the country, Mrs. Roosevelt's answer was that she did "not believe our people are war-minded."

She said it should be regarded as a community project, "preparation to defend, if necessary, your way of life." She predicted it would serve, as a peace-time benefit, to acquaint residents of each community with local conditions and result in correcting many of them.

She said the plan would probably be offered in a couple of weeks and that she hoped young people in each community would be used to accomplish the immense task of registration that would be required. Everyone would have to be registered, she pointed out, with a record of his skills and training and the hours he volunteered to serve.

Mrs. Roosevelt restated her views in favor of compulsory training for girls in such subjects as practical nursing and home economics, useful in time of emergency, and said many girls had asked her why they should not have the opportunity as well as the boys for training and service to their country. The training, she suggested, could be carried on in each community so as not necessarily to take the girls away from home.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation, received with Mrs. Roosevelt when the guests arrived for tea. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a black velvet gown and a corsage of mauve orchids; Mrs. Dunbar, black velvet and a hat of fuschia velvet, trimmed in ostrich tips.

The tea followed the first day's business sessions of the board at the Mayflower Hotel at which reports of officers were made.

Dr. Harriet Elliott Heard at Night

Last night the discussion of women's part in the defense program went on at a consumer forum under the title, "Ask the Experts," held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Dr. Harriet Elliott, consumer member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, urged the women to see that women are appointed in their States not only as members of the State advisory councils but also of committees serving under them—"not to represent women but as authorities in their special fields, representing all of the citizens," said Dr. Elliott.

A poll revealed that board members present were serving on the defense councils or committees in Maryland, Texas, California, Indiana, Michigan, North Carolina, Massachusetts, Illinois, Louisiana, Georgia, Iowa and New Hampshire. These will meet with

Mrs. Roosevelt Provides Views On Preparedness

Dr. Caroline F. Ware, of the advisory commission today.

"The present grave emergency will demand some sacrifices," Miss Elliott said, "but these can be made without jeopardizing the American concept of democracy which we are preparing to defend. We are not willing, nor is it necessary, to relax the social gains which our democracy has made possible for us to attain. Our very concept of living is being challenged by the totalitarian powers. This, with its inherent benefits we will protect and defend by facing and fulfilling our responsibilities to our Nation, our neighbors and ourselves."

The consumer division is working to maintain a steady flow of consumer goods of good quality at justifiable price levels, Miss Elliott explained.

The discussion ranged from school lunches and surplus commodities—of which a larger amount will be made available for the school liunch programs—to the labeling of products and the organizing of local cooking classes in Texas communities. Mrs. Dunbar presided and the women directed their questions to any member of the distinguished group of experts who knew the answers. These were: H. W. Brightman, chairman, National Consumer-Retailer Council; Dr. John Cassels, executive assistant to Dr. Elliott; Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, division of information, Agricultural Adjustment Administration; Miss Loda Mae Davis, civic groups section, Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense; Donald E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel, Department of Agriculture; Miss Ruth O'Brien, chief, division of textiles and clothing, Bureau of Home Economics; Dr. Louise Stanley, chief, Bureau of Home Economics; Miss Edna M. Van Horn, executive secretary, American Home Economics Association; Dr. Caroline F. Ware, specialist, advisory commission to the Council of National Defense; Roger Wolcott, executive secretary, National Consumer-Retailer Council.

Also present to answer questions relating to defense in the fields of health, maternal and child health, nutrition, recreation and welfare were Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief, Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, and Milburn L. Wilson, director of extension work, Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. Edgar Kay Gives Luncheon; 100 Attend

Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay entertained yesterday at a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel for about 100 guests in honor of the executive board of the Political Study Club and Mrs. David H. Kincheloe, of New York, and Mrs. Walter Gulley, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., who are guests at her home.

Luncheon was served in the west ballroom of the Shoreham, where the tables were arranged in the form of E and beautifully decorated with large bouquets of spring flowers.

An impromptu musical program followed the luncheon, at which time Mrs. Kincheloe gave one of her programs and Mrs. Ethel Pyne sang, accompanied by Mrs. Thora Hinshaw Seaton.

Chevy Chase Woman's Club Urges Alms Houses' Abolition

Russell T. Edwards (left), who presented to the Chevy Chase Woman's Club a tree in memory of his wife who was a member of the club; Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, president of the club who accepted the tree, and Mrs. Burke Edwards, daughter-in-law of Mr. Edwards. The tree is an elm and a "grandson" of the famous Washington Elm of Cambridge, Mass.

Group Also Resolves to Ask Resubmission To Voters of the Maryland Income Tax Amendment; Asks More Health Funds

Resolutions, asking that almshouses be abolished in the State of Maryland, that additional funds be allocated to meet the public health needs of Montgomery County and that the constitutional amendment on the Maryland income tax be resubmitted to the voters in phraseology "that can be understood by the layman" were passed yesterday by the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby presided at the session and Mrs. O. F. Kracek, chairman of legislation, submitted the resolutions. That regarding the almshouses, proposed that the sick inmates be placed in hospitals and others in suitable homes, and that additional funds be allocated if necessary to carry out the project.

The resolution on public health urged that through reapportionment of the county budget, the Montgomery County Commissioners grant the $1.25 per capita allotment of funds requested for the county health department. It also urged that all appointments in personnel be made under the regulations of the State's merit system.

Mrs. Milton Miles gave a talk about her trip along the Burma Road. Mme. Marguerita Zilliacus, soprano, sang a group of songs, including some of her own compositions both in Swedish and in English.

Another feature of the day was the planting of an elm that is a "grandson" of the famous Washington elm at Cambridge, Mass. Russell T. Edwards, who saved the tree from destruction a few days ago in the Sixteenth Street construction project, presented it to the club in memory of his wife, who had been a member for 20 years. The elm was propagated from seed by Mrs. James H. Dorsey, of Baltimore, and was planted originally on the grounds of the Nature Magazine Building by the late Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman, president of the General Federation of Woman's Clubs. Mrs. Kerby accepted the tree for the club.

Madame Chairman

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS of Parents and Teachers will continue its emphasis on its program of strengthening the emotional security of the family as its contribution to total defense, according to Mrs. William Kletzer, of Portland, Oreg., national president.

Interviewed on her short visit in Washington en route to New York for the executive meeting of the board of management, Mrs. Kletzer said she believed her organization could do nothing more valuable than to continue to protect the educational, health and social services for children in a time when emphasis everywhere was being placed on the adult in the defense program.

"There is danger," she said, "of children being overlooked in such an emergency; but in a few years, when they must take the responsibility, something will be found lacking unless the services for children are protected."

Mrs. Kletzer, who has been at the national headquarters in Chicago for the last two weeks, stopped in Washington on her way to New York to attend the reception given Tuesday night by Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and other members of the national board, at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Dunbar and Mrs. Kletzer have been friends for years and have worked together in civic projects in Portland, which is also Mrs. Dunbar's home city.

THE MANY State societies in Washington are planning parties this week-end honoring distinguished representatives of their home districts who will be here for the inaugural ceremonies.

Among them will be the dance of the Florida Society, from 10 to 1 Saturday night at the Shoreham Hotel. The society, whose president is the P. D. Gold, of the Board of Veterans' Appeals, also has issued invitations for a reception to be held in honor of Gov. and Mrs. Spessard L. Holland Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 in the Washington Hotel.

Sheppard will introduce new Congressional members.

The Delaware Society also will have a reception and dance on Friday night at Hotel 2400. Members of the Congressional delegation from the State, as well as Gov. and Mrs. Richard McMullen and Governor-elect and Mrs. Walter Bacon, will be guests of honor.

Senator and Mrs. Carter Glass will be the honored guests of the Virginia State Society "Lee-Jackson Ball" to be held at the Willard Hotel Thursday at 9 o'clock. Two Parties, Attracting Hundreds, Take Over Social Calendar for Day

Mrs. Stimson Holds Cabinet 'At Home;' Engagement of Miss Dugas Announced At Fete Given by Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin

By Hope Ridings Miller

CAPITALITES by the dozens—yea, the hundreds—were out and about late yesterday afternoon when two large parties, a Cabinet "at home" and a residential tea, took over the social calendar.

From 4 until 6 o'clock, Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, received a seemingly endless line of guests at Woodley, her magnificent home on Cathedral Avenue. From 5:30 to 7 o'clock Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin greeted a sizable number at Abremont, her home which, like Woodley, is one of the loveliest in Washington.

Both fetes were parties-with-a-purpose. Mrs. Stimson's chalked off her Cabinet reception for the season. Mrs. Erwin's was the occasion for making known an engagement of wide interest in Washington social circles.

The bride-elect is Miss Mona Brynina Dugas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles De Vallon Dugas, of Baton Rouge, La., and a cousin of Mrs. Erwin. Blair Bolles, son of Mrs. Zoe Blair Bolles, of Washington, and the late Dr. Bolles, is the lucky young man.

MISS DUGAS was graduated from Louisiana State University and is a member of Delta Zeta sorority, and Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism sorority. She is a grandniece of Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett, of Washington.

Mr. Bolles, who, through his mother, is descended from Pierre Laguiste, Marquis de Laclede, one of the founders of St. Louis, was born in that city. He attended Phillips Exeter Academy, class of 1929, and Yale College, class of 1933. He is a member of the Yale Club of New York and the National Press Club, and is now on the staff of the Washington Evening Star. Miss Dugas is a member of the society staff of the same newspaper. The wedding will take place in the spring—probably in April—at the Erwin home.

The hostess, Miss Dugas, Mr. Bolles and his mother received yesterday in the flower-decked drawing room. Looking as if she had stepped out of a picture frame was the pretty bride-elect, who wore a becoming frock of sea-green crepe with long sleeves and a narrow gold belt. A huge bouquet of white roses completed the picture. Miss Erwin had chosen a dress of darker green, cut on classic lines and trimmed with gold; while Mrs. Bolles appeared in black lace.

A SILVER VASE filled with red carnations, from the Abremont Greenhouse centered the tea table, which was lighted with tall red tapers in silver holders. In an adjoining room, where ice cream was served, pale pink carnations, flanked with pink tapers, furnished the decorative motif.

Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, sister of Mrs. Erwin, generally assisted, and among those who took turns at the tea table were Mrs. Blodgett, Mrs. T. Septimus Austin, Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr. Miss Katherine Nash served the ice cream. For the most part, guests were from the residential contingent; and the fete was pleasantly informal from first to last.

MEANWHILE, several hundred guests from official circles had put in an appearance at Mrs. Stimson's reception. In fact, the party precipitated one of the biggest traffic jams in the history of Cathedral Avenue, and a continuous line of limousines and taxicabs moved at snail's pace from the street up to Woodley for well over two hours.

Inside the spacious home the crowd dissolved somewhat. Bouquets of red roses, stemming from silver vases, and crackling open fires lent a cherry atmosphere to the rooms where guests collected and lingered as long as possible. Receiving in the drawing room, Mrs. Stimson wore a purple frock, fashioned on simple lines and trimmed with bands of gold. Col. Eugene Regnier introduced the guests, who were also greeted by Mrs. Robert Patterson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War. Her garnet velvet gown was worn with a matching turban.

AS IS ALWAYS the case at a Washington reception, guests yesterday completed their greetings in record time and made a beeline for the dining room. There, they crowded four deep around the rose-centered tea table. Easter lilies were also effectively used to decorate the room, which was crowded to the walls during the entire party. Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. William Bryden, Mrs. Jules James, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Arthur Palmer and Mrs. Eugene Regnier.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wearing a smart gray kidskin coat over her frock, dropped in to pay her respects. Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. George Barnett and Mrs James Lawrence Houghteling were among those glimpsed in the throng. Getting some first-hand information about a Capital "at home" was Mrs. Richard Gale, wife of the new Representative from Minnesota. A striking brunette, Mrs. Gale was smartly turned out in a black frock, accented with gold pockets. Incidentally, she is staying with Mrs. Keith Merrill for a few days.

MRS. WARREN AUSTIN was among the guests, as were Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Harry Blair and Mrs. Jesse Wolcott. Mrs. Emil Hurja was accompanied by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Hurja, and the latter's daughter, Miss Betty Hurja, who is attending Arlington Hall School. Col. Frank Morrow was one of the few men to brave the crush. Still other guests were Mme. Bianchi, wife of the Portuguese Minister; Mrs. A. A. Berle, Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Consuelo Seoane, Lady Leslie, Mrs. Frank Allen and Mrs. Henry Allen, of Fort Myer, and literally, hundreds more.

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED BRUCH

Gloria McGehee Becomes Bride

Yesterday afternoon in All Souls' Memorial Church, Miss Gloria McGehee, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Dan R. McGehee, of Mississippi, and Alfred Bruch, son of Mrs. F. M. Carter and the late Alfred E. Bruch, were married by the Rev. H. H. B. Sterrett.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a dusty blue street-length dress, a matching hat, dark blue accessories, and a corsage of white orchids.

Mrs. S. Francis Grady, her sister, who was the matron of honor and her only attendant, wore a dusty pink costume and a corsage of purple orchids. Her husband served as best man.

Among the out-of-town guests were Col. Arthur H. Carter, of New York, and the bridegroom's uncles, Carl S. Bruch and Edward T. Bruch, of Cleveland.

After the ceremony the newlyweds left by motor for New York. On their return at the end of the month they will be at home at 2943 Benton Place. They will remain there until June when Mr. Bruch will take his bride with him to Hollywood, where he plans to enter the technical side of motion pictures.

Party Brings Hawaii to D. C.

Guests came by plane from three directions—east, west and south—for the party which Mrs. Ruth Franklin Miller, of San Marino, gave last night in the Shoreham blue room. Guest of honor was Mrs. Fenton Dunlap.

From California flew Col. Art Goebel, recent winner of the Dole flight to Honolulu and winner of the Bendix Trophy. A friend of his, Harold Byrd, came from Dallas, Tex., by air, and John Sherwood, of New York, flew here.

Mrs. Miller had intended to go to Hawaii when she left California recently, but changed her mind and came to Washington to renew acquaintances. But in keeping with her plans for Hawaii, she turned last evening's function into an island party and provided each lady with a red or white lei. The hostess wore a Tahitian print made on sarong lines. A Hawaiian trio provided music in the Garbo room, where cocktails were served beforehand.

Guests included Miss Florence R. King, Lieut. Comdr. Edwin A. Taylor, Capt. and Mrs. H. H. Spanagel, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. T. U. Sisson, Maj. and Mrs. R. E. Starr, Lieut. Frequent visitors to Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Chandor have a host of friends and always are widely entertained here. Among fetes on their forthcoming calendar is the party that Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken will give for them on Saturday afternoon.

Guests were Senorita Patria Mencia, of the Cuban Embassy; Senorita Bernardino, Senora de Moody, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Charles E. Fairman, Mrs. Clifford Lee Corbin, Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. Lee Murphy and Mrs. Joseph Casey.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

MRS. Warren Lee Pierson has just had her first book accepted by the first publisher to whom she sent it. The wife of the Director of the Export-Import Bank is still rather startled at the idea that soon she will see her name on a volume, for, according to friends, she has never done any writing before.

DUDLEY HARMON

The book is described as a mystery story with a South American background. Perhaps Mrs. Pierson got the idea for it on her recent trip to Brazil and Argentina. That she has imagination every one knows who saw her wearing her new turban last fall—an old muffler of her husband's which she wound around her head a la Carmen Miranda.

Mrs. Pierson formerly was a violinist. Her most entertaining job was playing for tear-jerking scenes in Cecil B. DeMille films. With her violin she stood on the set and coaxed sobs from temperamental stars who needed music to emote.

• • • •

THE PIERSONS are now in Cuba, where the Government official is reported to be investigating another loan. Before she knew she was going Mrs. Pierson had planned a luncheon for Mrs. Jesse Jones and Senora de Prebisch, wife of the Argentine financial expert. The party went on anyway, despite her absence, with Mme. Lombard as hostess.

• • • •

SOONER or later, as someone has said, everybody turns out to be a writer. The other evening Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, stepdaughter of the Portuguese Minister, was telling how she got her first nibble from an editor. She sent out, all at one time, 26 letters with that many different ideas. She got two encouraging responses, and is now doing pieces on art for a national magazine.

• • • •

BESIDES attracting Washington's intellectuals, the Town Hall also seems to have interested persons who are strangely whimsical, or something. The director recently received a dollar bill and a note requesting that a ticket be sent to "Irgo the Poet, Alexandria, Va." Which was done.

At one meeting this year a man showed up wearing a tin hat, faintly reminiscent of a Confederate general's, trimmed with red cellophane. He carried a toy airplane from which a spark shot when he turned the propeller.

The Town Hall considers Gene Tunney probably the most chivalrous lecturer who ever lived. Officials had already signed a contract with his manager for a talk on youth. When Mr. Tunney heard the news he insisted it be canceled. At that time Mrs. Roosevelt was active in behalf of the American Youth Congress, and Mr. Tunney said it would not be "good taste" to light out against it right in the First Lady's own city.

ODDS AND ENDS: The former Rumanian envoy, Radu Irimescu, is far away from the problems which he had to cope with as Minister. With his wife he is vacationing in California at the ranch of Floyd Odlum and Jacqueline Cochran, the flier . . . The high light of Princess Juliana's trip to this country, according to a compatriot of hers, was a trip to a New York drug store. There she perched on a stool and had her first ice cream soda . . . Practically everybody you ever heard of will be in town for inauguration week-end. Mrs. Higginson Rogers has cards out for a cocktail party on Sunday to meet Mr. and Mrs. Rexford Guy Tugwell.

Culbertsons To Give Party

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson will leave by plane for Guatemala on Saturday morning, to be gone about two weeks. It's a business trip for Mr. Culbertson, who was in Guatemala shortly before Christmas, but for Mrs. Culbertson it will be merely a vacation jaunt.

Tomorrow afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson will entertain at an "at home" from 5 to 7 o'clock in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue. Since plans for the trip were made hastily, the party was moved up several days, and occording to the hostess the fete will be both "informal and impromptu."

Price to Be Honor Guest of the Hurjas

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja will give a dinner on inauguration night in honor of Gov. James H. Price of Virginia and Mrs. Price. Gov. Price and Mr. Hurja are Kappa Sigma fraternity brothers, and a number of other "brothers" and their wives are to be among the guests.

Sharing honors with Gov. and Mrs. Price will be Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner, of Michigan, and Mrs. Van Wagoner, and the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Procope.

Mrs. Lewis Dabney Gives Luncheon

Braving country roads which were coated with ice, a group of women motored out to the Virginia home of Mrs. Lewis Dabney yesterday for luncheon.

Among those in the company were Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of Justice Douglas; Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, with her sister, Mrs. Royall Hauer, of New Rochelle, N. Y.; Mrs. George Pierce Baker, jr., and Mrs. Charles Dillon, sister of the hostess.

Miss Tuttle Is Engaged To David Blair

Bride-Eelect Is The Daughter Of N. Y. Woman

Mr. and Mrs. Hendley R. Callaway, of New York City, announce the engagement of Mrs. Callaway's daughter, Miss Fredrika Bremer Tuttle, to David Hunt Blair, of Washington, D. C.

Miss Tuttle is the daughter of Frank Wright Tuttle, of Hollywood, Calif. She was graduated from the International School at Geneva, Switzerland, and from Sarah Lawrence College.

Mr. Blair attended the Hill School, the University of Freiburg and was graduated from Princeton last year. He is a member of the Chevy Chase Club, of Washington, and of the Princeton Clubs, of Washington and New York. Since his graduation he has been in the Government service in Washington. He will leave soon to join the Army.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Mrs. Wyatt Gives Affair Honoring Mrs. Carter Glass

Mrs. Walter Wyatt entertained at a luncheon yesterday at her Kalmia Road home in honor of Mrs. Carter Glass, of Virginia. Though she had set places for 24 guests, influenza cut down the list of those present to such an extent that Mrs. Wyatt's guest book listed only 18 names.

The ranking guest was Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Supreme Court Justice. Others present were Mrs. James Hughes, wife of the Senator from Delaware, Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Miss Lucinda Rayburn, sister of the Speaker of the House; Mrs. Jack Beall, who is spending the winter at the Shoreham Hotel; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Claude Hamilton, Mrs. Gilbert Stanley Underwood, Mrs. Paul E. Shorb, Mrs. John Clark, Miss Anna Bell Ward, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, Mrs. Charles Crawford, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and Miss Marjorie Webster.

Chilean Ambassador To Arrive Today

With them is their 21-year-old daughter, Christina, who has visited the Capital several times before. Senor Michels was a Senator and a vice president of Chile's radical party when he was named Ambassador. This is his first diplomatic post.

Text of Hull's Statement to House Foreign Affairs Group on Lease-Lend Bill

Secretary Attacks 'Road of Conquest' Followed by Axis

The text of Secretary Hull's statement before the House Foreign Affairs Committee follows:

We are here to consider a bill designed to promote the defense of the United States. I shall not discuss the technical details of the proposed measure, since that will be done by other departments of the Government more directly concerned with these matters. I shall place before you briefly the controlling facts relating to the manner in which the dangers that now confront this hemisphere and, therefore, this Nation have arisen, and the circumstances which render imperative all possible speed in our preparation for meeting these dangers.

During the past eight years, our Government has striven, by every peaceful means at its disposal, to secure the establishment in the world of conditions under which there would be a reasonable hope for enduring peace. We have proceeded in the firm belief that only if such conditions come to exist will there be a certainty that our country will be fully secure and safely at peace. The establishment of such conditions calls for acceptance and application by all nations of certain basic principles of peaceful and orderly international conduct and relations.

Accordingly, in the conduct of our foreign relations, this Government has directed its efforts to the following objectives: (1) Peace and security for the United States with advocacy of peace and limitation and reduction of armament as universal international objectives; (2) Support for law, order, justice and morality and the principle of nonintervention; (3) Restoration and cultivation of sound economic methods and relations, based on equality of treatment; (4) Development in the promotion of these objectives, of the fullest practicable measure of international cooperation; (5) Promotion of the security, solidarity, and general welfare of the Western Hemisphere.

By Word and by Deed

Observance and the advocacy of the basic principles underlying these policies and efforts toward their acceptance and application became increasingly important as three nations, one after another, made abundantly clear, by word and by deed, their determination to repudiate and destroy the very foundations of a civilized world order under law and to enter upon the road of armed conquest, of subjugation of other nations, and of tyrannical rule over their victims.

The first step in this fatal direction occurred in the Far East in 1931 with forceful occupation of Manchuria in contravention of the provisions of the Nine Power Treaty and of the Kellogg-Briand Pact. The equilibrium in the Far East which had been established by the Washington Conference Treaties of 1921-1922 became seriously disturbed by the setting up by forceful means in a part of China of a regime under Japanese control under the name of "Manchukuo." This control over Manchuria has been marked by the carrying out of a policy of discrimination which has resulted in forcing out American and other foreign interests.

During the years that followed, Japan went steadily forward in her preparations for expansion by force of arms. In December, 1934, she gave notice of her intention to terminate the naval treaty of February 6, 1922. She then proceeded with intensified construction of military and naval armaments, at the same time undertaking, from time to time, limited actions directed toward an extension of her domination over China and involving disregard and destruction of the lawful rights and interests of other countries, including the United States.

In July, 1937, the armed forces of Japan embarked upon large-scale military operations against China. Invading forces of more than a million men occupied large areas along the seaboard and in the central provinces. In these areas there were set up puppet regimes which instituted systems of controls and monopolies discriminatory in favor of the interests of the invading country.

It has been clear throughout that Japan has been actuated from the start by broad and ambitious plans for establishing herself in a dominant position in the entire region of the Western Pacific. Her leaders have openly declared their determination to achieve and maintain that position by force of arms and thus to make themselves masters of an area containing almost one-half of the entire population of the world. As a consequence, they would have arbitrary control of the sea and trade routes in that region.

Previous experience and current developments indicate that the proposed "new order" in the Pacific area means, politically, domination by one country. It means, economically, employment of the resources of the area concerned for the benefit of that country and to the ultimate impoverishment of other parts of the area and exclusion of the interests of other countries. It means, socially, the destruction of personal liberties and the reduction of the conquered peoples to the role of inferiors.

It should be manifest to every person that such a program for the subjugation and ruthless exploitation by one country of nearly one-half of the population of the world is a matter of immense significance, importance and concern to every other nation, wherever located.

Notwithstanding the course which Japan has followed during recent years, this Government has made repeated efforts to persuade the Japanese Government that her best interests lie in the development of friendly relations with the United States and with other countries which believe in orderly and peaceful processes among nations. We have at no time made any threats.

Anxious Concern Over Italy

In Europe, the first overt breach of world order was made by Italy, when, in 1935, that country invaded and conquered Ethiopia, in direct contravention of solemnly accepted obligations under the Covenant of the League of Nations and of the Kellogg-Briand pact. In 1939, Italy seized Albania in violation of unequivocal treaty obligations. In the summer of 1940, she entered the European war on the side of Germany with the openly avowed purpose of participating with that country in a remodeling of the world on the basis of a "new order" founded upon unlimited and unrestricted use of armed force. Finally, without provocation, she has attacked Greece.

Throughout this period, the Government of the United States made known to the government of Italy its anxious concern over the growing deterioration of peaceful international relationships. Both on the occasion of the Italo-Ethiopian controversy and during the period preceding Italy's entry into the European war, this Government addressed numerous communications to the government of Italy in an effort to prevent new breaches of world order.

Germany, from the time that Hitler and his associates came to power in 1933, began feverishly to construct vast armaments, while following a program of repeatedly made and repeatedly broken promises as a part of a skillful diplomatic game designed to lull the suspicions of other countries. After employing for several months at the disarmament conference in Geneva tactics which have since become a distinct pattern of German policy—further demands as previous demands are met—Germany, in October, 1933, rendered impossible any effective international agreement for limitation of armaments by withdrawing from the disarmament conference. There then followed nearly six years during which Germany, having determined upon a policy of unlimited conquest, moved inevitably toward the catastrophe of war.

Germany's Preparation

Germany's work of preparation followed two main lines. The first consisted in the creation of armed force. To this end, her entire national economy was transformed into a highly regimented and highly disciplined war economy. Every phase of national activity became harnessed to the requirements of preparation for war. More than half of the national income was expended for military purposes. Foreign trade and foreign payments became rigidly controlled for the same purpose. The production of planes and tanks and guns and all the other countless accessories of a modern war machine became the immediate objective of the whole national effort.

The second line consisted of a series of steps directed toward improving the strategic position of Germany. The first of these was the occupation and fortification of the Rhineland in 1936, in direct violation of the Locarno Treaty, voluntarily entered into by Germany ten years earlier. Then followed, in rapid succession, the absorption of Austria, in direct violation of pledges given by Hitler to respect the sovereignty and independence of that country; the dismemberment and final seizure of Czechoslovakia, in spite of Hitler's assurances after the seizure of Austria that Germany desired no additional territory in Europe and in violation of a solemn pledge to respect the independence of that country, officially givn in October, 1938; the annexation of Memel; and finally, on September 1, 1939, a brutal attack upon, and the devastation and partitioning of, Poland.

The period of the war has witnessed the invasion and occupation of Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, in violation of the scrupulously observed neutrality of these countries and in contravention, in the cases of some of these countries, of assurances expressly given by Germany of her intention to respect their independence and sovereignty; the invasion and partial occupation of France; the splitting up of Rumania and the German occupation of the remaining portion of that country.

Reigns of Terror

These seizures have been accomplished through a combined use of armed force applied from without and of an almost unbelievable amount of subversive activity from within. Each of the invaded and occupied countries has been subjected to a reign of terror and despotism. By word and by deed, the invaders have made unmistakably clear their determination to impose permanently upon these unfortunate countries a rule of tyranny frequently reminiscent of the worst pages of ancient history.

So long as there seemed to remain even a faint hope of inducing the leaders of Germany to desist from the course which they were following, the Government of the United States neglected no opportunity to make its voice heard in restraint. It went further, and repeatedly offered its assistance in economic readjustments which might promote solution of the existing difficulties by peaceful means. All hope disappeared when the Nazi legions struck at Poland and plunged Europe into a new war.

Since then, it has become increasingly apparent that mankind is today face to face, not with regional wars of isolated conflicts, but with an organized, ruthless and impacable movement of steadily expanding conquest. We are in the presence of forces which are not restrained by considerations of law or principles of morality; which have fixed no limits for their program of conquest; which have spread over large areas on land and are desperately struggling now to seize control of the oceans as an essential means of achieving and maintaining their conquest of the other continents.

Control of the high seas by law-abiding nations is the key to the security of the Western Hemisphere in the present-day world situation. Should that control be gained by the partners of the tripartite pact, the danger to our country, great as it is today, would be multiplied many fold.

Dangers Stressed

It is frequently said that there can be no danger of an invasion of the New World. It is said: As Germany has not been able to cross the British Channel, how can she cross the Atlantic?

German forces could cross the Channel in an hour's time were it not for the fact that Britain, now thoroughly prepared and well armed, is fighting every hour of the day to prevent that crossing, and is fortified with every known device to repel a landing. The 20 miles of water between Continental Europe and Britain are under British, not German, control. Were Britain defeated, and were she to lose command of the seas, Germany could easily cross the Atlantic—especially the South Atlantic—unless we were ready and able to do what Britain is doing now. Were the Atlantic to fall into German control, the Atlantic would offer little or no assurance of security.

Under these conditions our national security would require the continuous devotion of a very great part of all our work and wealth for defense production, prolonged universal military service, extremely burdensome taxation, unending vigilance against enemies within our borders, and complete involvement in power diplomacy. These would be the necessities of a condition as exposed as ours would be.

Great Britain is today a veritable fortress. So will this country be when our preparations for armed defense are completed. Most likely, however, it will not be by direct and frontal attack that the would-be invaders will undertake the conquest of this country, if they ever have a chance to embark upon such an enterprise. It is rather to be anticipated that their efforts would first be directed against other portions of this hemisphere, more vulnerable than this country, and then against us.

Subversive Forces

Subversive forces are hard at work in many American countries, seeking to create internal dissension and dis-union as a now familiar prelude to armed invasion. Today these forces are held in check and are being steadily eradicated. But the entire situation would change if control of the high seas were to pass into the hands of the would-be attackers. Under such conditions, the difficulties of continental defense would demand from us vastly greater efforts than we are now called upon to envisage.

The most serious question today for this country is whether the control of the high seas shall pass into the hands of powers bent on a program of unlimited conquest. It is in this light, above all, that we should order our present-day thinking and action with respect to the amount of material assistance which our country is prepared to furnish Great Britain.

On no other question of public policy are the people of this country so nearly unanimous and so emphatic today as they are on that of the imperative need, in our most vital interest, to give Great Britain and other victims of attack the maximum of material aid in the shortest possible space of time. This is so because it is now altogether clear that such assistance to those who resist attack is a vital part of our national self-defense. In the face of the forces of conquest now on the march across the earth, self-defense is and must be the compelling consideration in the determination of wise and prudent national policy.

For us to withhold aid to victims of attack would not result in a restoration of peace. It would merely tend to perpetuate the enslavement of nations already invaded and subjugated and provide an opportunity for the would-be conquerors to gather strength for an attack against us.

Rights Disregarded

The protagonists of the forces against which we are today forging the instrumentalities of self-defense have repudiated in every essential respect the long-accepted principles of peaceful and orderly international relations. They have disregarded every right of neutral nations, even of those to which they themselves had given solemn pledges of inviolability. Their constantly employed weapons for the government of their unfortunate victims are unrestricted terrorization; firing squads, deceit, forced labor, confiscation of property; concentration camps and deprivations of every sort.

The most scrupulous observance by peaceful countries of legal concepts provides today no security whatever. Many nations which trusted to the integrity of their intentions and the care with which they observed their legal obligations have been destroyed.

I am certain that the day will come when no nation will have the effrontery and the cynicism to demand that, while it itself scoffs at and disregards every principle of law and order, its intended victims must adhere rigidly to all such principles—until the very moment when its armed forces have crossed their frontiers. But so long as such nations exist, we cannot and must not be diverted—either by their threats or by their hypocritical protests from our firm determination to create means and conditions of self-defense wherever and in whatever form we find essential to our own security.

The present bill sets up machinery which will enable us to make the most effective use of our resources for our own needs and for the needs of those whom, in our own self-defense, we are determined thus to aid. The great problem of democracy is to organize and to use its strength with sufficient speed and completeness. The proposed legislation is an essential measure for that purpose. This bill will make it possible for us to allocate our resources in ways best calculated to provide for the security of this Nation and of this continent in the complex and many-sided conditions of danger with which we are and are likely to be confronted. Above all, it will enable us to do all these things in the speediest possible manner. And, overwhelmingly, speed is our greatest need today.

Guard, Reserve Rejects to Get Appeal Chance

Boards to Reexamine Officers Turned Down On Physical Grounds

National Guard and Reserve officers physically disqualified for Federal service as early as last September 6 have been given another opportunity by the War Department to make their services available for national defense, The Post learned yesterday.

Under provisions of a War Department letter dated December 28, appeal boards are to be set up in each corps area to which a rejected officer may appeal from original medical examining boards. This provision, retroactive to September 6, will make possible appeals by hundreds of officers already disqualified and reinstatement of many of them.

Corps area and department commanders are authorized to convene as many appeal boards as are necessary, each board to consist of medical officers who were not members of the original examining board. These boards will examine disqualified officers only for the defect for which they were disqualified by the first board and will report to the corps area or department commanders.

Consisting of specialists, it was expected the appeal boards would inquire much more exhaustively into disqualifying defects than the original board could have done. No officer will be prevented from entering upon active duty by findings of the original board alone.

Both Guard and Reserve officers may be examined within 60 days prior to induction if qualified boards exist before which they may appear. The War Department and corps area commanders may grant waivers for certain physical defects which would not interfere with the officer's performance of his duties.

Reserve officers ordered to extended active duty more than 500 miles from their homes may be sent to temporary duty nearer their homes until they have been physically examined and qualified.

The letter indicated regulations governing physical examinations of Guard and Reserve officers for extended active duty were under revision.

Total Defense Comes to York; How a Typical U. S. Town Reacts to the Rush to Build Arms

What happens to a typical, long-rooted industrial city when it answers the call of America's defense program is disclosed in the response of York, Pa., where factories are sharing machinery and assembling skilled craftsmen to operate it? The resultant greater buying power, higher living standards, declining relief rolls, labor stabilization, housing stringency and effects upon the character of the people are set forth in the following article by a staff correspondent of the New York Times who lived in York for a week and talked with all segments of the population:

By Byron Darnton

Copyright by New York Times

York, Pa., Jan. 15.—A lot of York girls who a few months back had to be satisfied with $2 and $3 dresses have jumped to the $7 class. They're buying more beauty, too. The shampoo and permanent, at $2 or $2.50, was their limit only a short time ago, but now they "get the works"—shampoo, a more expensive permanent, a manicure and an "arch," which is eyebrow plucking; it all adds up to at least $4.60.

One of the big banks reports, typically, that 20 per cent more Christmas savings accounts (by value) were started this year than last. And home owners, burdened by mortgages, now are taking healthy bites out of the principal, whereas not long ago they considered themselves lucky to keep up the interest.

Over the holidays York's three State liquor stores sold one-third more bottled goods (rye was the big item) than they did a year ago.

And so it goes all down the line, in all the many activities that make up the life of this thriving community of 56,000 persons.

Girls who learn stenography at the commercial schools are graduated to job instead of to idleness. Bank clearings were $62,731,603 the first 11 months of 1940, against $56,186,158 the first 11 months of 1939.

There were 792 arrests for drunkenness in 1940, against 649 in 1939. Police say prostitutes are more numerous. The syphilis rate was doubled. The use of electrical current for industrial purposes is up 17 per cent.

Relief hasn't been wholly eliminated, but it has been greatly reduced. Private and public agencies caring for the poor are approaching the point where their only cases will be the mentally or physically handicapped, or the shiftless.

Personnel managers in the metal working plants are searching the towns and cities of Pennsylvania and Maryland for men who know how to operate turret lathes or make patterns for castings.

"So far as skilled labor is concerned," says Clayton J. Wallace, manager of the local office of the State Employment Service, "our task a year ago was to find jobs for men; now it's to find men for jobs."

The reason for all this is defense. For months now the Nation has been reading about billions appropriated for the Army, billions for the Navy, billions to build new machine tools and new plants. Those tremendous appropriations are producing other things than ships, planes, tanks, guns. They are producing prosperity in communities throughout the land.

In vast industrial centers like New York and Chicago, the effects of those billions on the lives of ordinary people are not easily apparent. In this small industrial beehive, the most casual eye can see everywhere evidence of the change that defense preparations have brought into the lives of workers, employers, merchants, teachers, taxicab drivers, salesgirls and clergymen.

York's slice of the defense budget is a big one. Exact statistics are unattainable, because much of the work is being done under subcontracts that do not appear in Washington statistics. Estimates start at $25,000,000 and run above $40,000,000. Every indication is the latter figure will be topped.

York's factories are getting repeat orders, and the national defense needs are being upped constantly. Officials of the biggest war goods plant in town say they have no idea how high their production schedules will be six months from now.

On the part of workers and employers alike there is growing recognition of necessity of vast and quick arms production. Both sides talk patriotism without getting pompous about it. Both sides speak realistically about the necessity of making sacrifices.

Perhaps the point can best be made clear by the statements of two men—Roy (Doc) Dougherty, president of the bricklayers union and a strong local leader in the American Federation of Labor, and W. S. Shipley, chairman of the board of the York Ice Machinery Corporation.

Dougherty, who lives, breathes and shouts union organization at the top of quite a voice, has an earthy vocabulary. Shipley, once a shop man, also knows the words.

"Tell those ——," said Mr. Dougherty, referring to the employers, "that once every man who can work has been put to work, labor will more than match every sacrifice they make."

"I think," said Shipley, "that employers can be depended on to do everything they can to preserve a country in which workers still can call their bosses ——."

York's importance as a defense center can be attested by the fact that Army officers already have picked out the emplacements for the antiaircraft guns that one day will protect its indispensable industries. The FBI has been here advising manufacturers how best to guard against sabotage.

The Red Cross and the health authorities have made full arrangements to take care of any intentionally caused disaster. Near each important factory emergency first-aid stations have been selected; the health authorities know what would be needed, in the way of sterilizing facilities, to treat the critically injured on the spot.

All these precautions have been taken because York's industries are turning out such articles of war as welded tanks, gun mounts, antiaircraft guns, tank guns, welders' gloves, controllable pitch propellers, tool gauges, powder presses, cotton stocks, cold storage equipment for battleships, air-conditioning units, machin-gun cradle assemblies, fuse setters, shells, trench mortars and metallic ladder treads.

U. S. Reports Flu Cases Rise in East, Decrease in West

All but ended in the West, the Nation's outbreak of mild influenza is now at or approaching its worst in the East, the Public Health Service indicated yesterday.

Latest telegraphic figures showed that during the week ended last Saturday, 89,828 cases were reported throughout the country, compared with 77,144 for the previous seven-day period. The total was the highest since the last week of December, 1932, when 90,000 cases occurred.

Locally, the flu situation is well in hand, according to Health Officer George C. Ruhland. However, he urged hospitals yesterday to bar visitors who are "obviously suffering from colds." Twenty-four new cases of influenza were reported to the Health Department yesterday, bringing the year's total to 207.

The disease made its greatest gains last week in the South Atlantic States, the number of new cases rising from 4,308 to 13,629. Virginia jumped from 1,752 to 4,200, South Carolina from 1,581 to 3,686, and Georgia from 788 to 5,002.

Dr. Overholser Favors Home Care for Aged

More sympathetic understanding of the problems of the aged was called for last night by Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Addressing the District Medical Society, Dr. Overholser pointed out that the gradually increasing ratio of elderly persons in the population has been accompanied by an even sharper rise in admissions to mental hospitals of patients 60 years old or older

"As a general proposition," he said, "it may be said that mental hospital cases should be thought of for cases of mental disorder in the aged only as a last resort and after every attempt at home care or nursing in a nursing home or some similar institution has been exhausted."

In 1900, only 4 per cent of the Nation's population were over 65 and by 1980 it is estimated that 15 per cent will fall in this age group, Dr. Overholser declared.

Discussing the various types of mental problems associated with the aging, Dr. Overholser cited a particularly odd condition—presbyophrenia—in which the victim covers up a poor memory by fabricating answers to questions.

For example, if he were asked what he was doing 10 minutes earlier—and couldn't remember—he would make up a fanciful story, possibly one which was suggested to him by the question.

Other speakers were Dr. Henry A. Gwynn and Dr. E. Hiram Reede.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Plain-speaking Roy F. Hendrickson, Agriculture personnel director, yesterday put his finger on an employe sore spot in his annual report.

If an employe is fired, quits, or is retired, the official explained, he is paid for his accumulated annual leave. But if the employe dies on the job no payment of his earned salary is made to his estate. The practice, Hendrickson states, is "manifestly unfair" and he promises to press for remedial legislation. He also proposes legislation which would permit personnel directors to buy personnel character records from outside sources. Another legislative proposal Hendrickson makes would permit him to train persons to take jobs of employes called into military service and other defense jobs. Agriculture, he says, faces the possible loss of 3,500 experienced employes, many of whom occupy important administrative positions below the policy-determining level.

Earl G. Harrison quits today as chief of Alien Registration. He had agreed to come here for only a few months. He was a great success in a difficult job, and though a Philadelphia Republican, inside word is that he'll be offered a key Federal post . . . USHA has made an excellent record on defense housing. It started 23 projects in July. Four are completed and the other 19 are 35 per cent complete . . . Labor's Conciliation Service is warmly praised in the American Federationist, official A. F. of L. publication, which urges expansion of the agency and concludes: "This service has earned the right to confidence" . . . Life magazine is doing a picture story on a typical Government girl . . . Consumer Commissioner Elliott, of the National Defense Commission, has her attorneys drafting model fair rent legislation which the District might use if the rents begin to climb.

Uncle Sam is establishing what amounts to his first concentration camp. More than 450 Nazi seamen and officers of the scuttled steamer Columbus will be placed in an abandoned CCC camp in New Mexico for the duration. Immigration and Naturalization Service ordered the camp set up. A force of border patrolmen are being assigned to keep a constant watch on the Nazis. The German Embassy here will share expense of the camp. The Columbus was scuttled off the Virginia coast and her seamen were taken to New York. The Nazis later were sent to San Francisco where they were supposed to sail on a Japanese vessel. Complications developed, however. With no way for them to get home, there wasn't much else for the Government to do except keep the sailors in one place. A similar camp probably will be established soon for other stranded foreign sailors.

IT DOESN'T COME IN BOOKS, BROTHERS.

Last summer the Agriculture Department issued a booklet on "house-fly control." A radio news broadcaster mentioned it on his program, apparently mumbling his words.

Officials revealed yesterday they are still getting requests from farmers for copies of the booklet on "housewife control."

6 Democrats Put on House District Unit

All but One Chosen For Committee Are Freshmen On Capitol Hill

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Six Democratic members were selected for the House District Committee yesterday by majority members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

All except one of the members are freshmen, and the exception, Representative John Edward Sheridan, of Pennsylvania, has been in Congress only since November, 1939, when he was elected at a special election to fill a vacancy caused by death.

The committee selections were not announced and are understood to be subject to approval of the full committee tomorrow morning.

At the same time the Senate Steering Committee was understood to have voted to nominate Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, for the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee. The committee may make its report to the Senate today.

Louisiana Newspapermen

The new House District Committee members, who must be elected by the House, are, besides Sheridan:

Representatives E. Edward Hebert, of Louisiana; Sam M. Russell, of Texas; Lucien J. Maciora, of Connecticut; Oren Harris, of Arkansas; and Henry M. Jackson, of Washington.

Nominations for four minority vacancies on the House District Committee have not been announced.

Representative Hebert, whose name is misspelled in the Congressional Record, and who pronounces it A-Bare, is a former city editor of the New Orleans States, which broke the Louisiana political WPA scandal on June 9, 1939.

Hebert is 39 years old, married and the father of one child. He was sent to Washington on May 15, 1940, as the personal representative of Gov. Sam Houston Jones.

Sheridan, a lawyer and resident of Philadelphia, is understood to have had the backing of the majority whip, Representative Pat Boland. He was at one time a member and secretary of the board of revision of taxes of Philadelphia County.

Maciora, who was elected to Congress from Connecticut at large, has been in the grocery business, the furniture and undertaking business, and has been a life insurance agent. He served three terms in the General Assembly and was formerly chairman of the New Britain police board.

Harris, who comes from El Dorado, Ark., is a lawyer and former prosecuting attorney of the Thirteenth Judicial District.

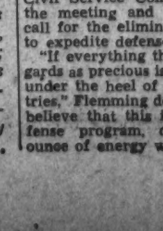
Russell, born and reared on a farm, was one time district attorney and later judge of the Twenty-ninth Judicial District.

Jackson was formerly prosecuting attorney of Snohomish County, Wash. He is unmarried.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, acting chairman of the House District Committee, plans to call a meeting of the committee in the absence of Chairman Randolph, who is ill in Garfield Hospital, as soon as all nominations have been approved by the House.

Group Health Members to Hear Sigerist Tonight

Dr. Henry Ernest Sigerist, of Johns Hopkins University, will address Group Health Association members at their annual meeting tonight in the South Agriculture Building auditorium.



SIGERIST

New trends in the organization of American medicine will be Dr. Sigerist's subject, it was announced. Group Health Association itself, a health cooperative for Federal employes, will serve as an illustration of the speaker's remarks.

Last year's financial report will be presented to G. H. A. members, who will elect several new board directors. It will be the last meeting presided over by Cameron G. Garman, president, who has announced his intention of stepping down after two one-year terms.

The new G. H. A. head will be elected by the board of directors on Saturday.

D. C. Bachelors Beware! Lady Cupid Is Here

Lonely Hearts Leader Is Out to Rebuild Your Hope Chests

By Jack Morris
Post Staff Writer

Cupid came to town yesterday in the person of Nelle Brooke Stull and immediately drew a bead—or whatever you do with a bow and arrow—on such notable Washington bachelors as Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, J. Edgar Hoover and Senator Tom Connally.

Mrs. Stull runs one of the better known lonely hearts clubs, which she says is not a lonely hearts club at all but "a rebuilt hope chest."

She's here to make the Capital's prominent bachelors "marriage conscious," she says, but everybody knows the object of her affection—new members (don't push girls, there's room for everybody who's got $6 a year).

The lady was kind enough to grant an interview last night, and it was a pip. Hold on, lonely hearts, here we go.

Mrs. Stull (she's got a husband in Elyria, Ohio) received in her room at the Ambassador Hotel, with rings on her fingers (five of them, four of diamonds and one of zircon) and bells on her nerves (the telephone, she said, has rung constantly since her arrival).

A black velvet dress matched her jet black hair. And her disposition, evidenced by contagious guffaws, was something for skeptics to witness who say fat people aren't jolly.

Mrs. Stull got under way by berating Justice Murphy et als for being bachelors and, like the club she started 20 years ago, once she got started she was like a snowball on the side of a mountain.

"I'm going to rouse some of these prominent old bachelors here," she declared. "I'm going to rouse them and make them marriage-conscious. Now take Frank Murphy. He'd make a wonderful husband, except I don't like his eyebrows. Or Tom Connally, or Bob Reynolds . . . Bob Reynolds already married. At least once? Well, good, that makes him all the more eligible . . .

Scared of Hoover

"Edgar Hoover? Well, yes, but I'm sort of scared of him. He might run me in.

"What all women want is a great man, and these bachelors fit the bill. But what they want is a great many women."

When the laughter subsided, Mrs. Stull got started telling about all kinds of things, principally love and marriage, and she let drop some gems.

For instance: "Love begins when she sinks into his arms, but it ends with her arms in his sink."

Sex-Appeal Becomes Ex-Appeal

And: "The sex appeal of most of my women has turned to ex-appeal."

And: "Love is like a mosquito. It wakes you up when you least expect it. And once it bites you there is nothing left to do but scratch it."

Mrs. Stull said she'd be here "as long as business holds out." The line forms on the eleventh floor, but remember, the object is matrimony.

Composer Sings At Recital to Aid China Magazine

The concert was held for benefit of the China Monthly Magazine.

Miss Chamberlain was assisted by Enid Hobbs Gundy, pianist, and Bertrand Bernath, violinist.

The benefit program will be repeated at 8:30 p. m. today.

Three prominent Washingtonians have joined the China Relief Legion, it was announced yesterday. They are Mrs. Henry Morganthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of the former Ambassador to Belgium, and Mrs. William Crozier.

'Do the Impossible,' Flemming Urges Government Workers

Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming told a meeting of Government workers last night that they must believe in the "terrible urgency" of the present emergency and "do the impossible" in their jobs to prove that democracy can be efficient.

He spoke to an audience of 300 in the North Interior Building auditorium, celebrating the fifty-eighth anniversary of the signing of the first civil service bill by President Chester A. Arthur. The meeting was sponsored by the National Federation of Federal Employes.

Civil Service Commissioners Harry B. Mitchell and Lucille F. McMillin and Representative Robert Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, attended the meeting and heard Flemming call for the elimination of red tape to expedite defense work.

"If everything that democracy regards as precious is not to be ground under the heel of totalitarian countries," Flemming declared, "we must believe that this is an 'all out' defense program, demanding every ounce of energy we possess."

Flemming, Mitchell and Mrs. McMillin paid tribute to Ramspeck for his work for civil service, and Flemming called the recently adopted Ramspeck Act "the most outstanding achievement in the history of civil service."

Ramspeck warned the Government workers to "watch their step" in the present emergency. The American people, he said, are on the verge of hysteria over the international situation and will smash anything that seems to be obstructing the defense program.

"There will be efforts made in the Congress to take away from the working people some of the gains they have made," Ramspeck said. "You must be careful not to furnish ammunition for those who have this intention."

Mitchell cautioned the civil servants not to become jittery when they face noncompetitive examinations under the Ramspeck Act. He told them that the examinations will be along the lines of the work they are doing at present. Experience, he added, will count for a great deal.

Two Citizen Groups Blast Wild Drivers

Dahlgren Terracers Would Make Jail Term Mandatory For Drunk, Reckless

Traffic problems were discussed by two citizens associations last night.

Dahlgren Terrace residents urged a law requiring a mandatory jail sentence for drunk and reckless drivers. Chevy Chase Association prepared to cooperate with the proposed citizens' traffic vigilante committee, and urged strict enforcement of traffic laws against pedestrians as well as motorists.

Association activities last night were as follows:

Chevy Chase

Godfrey L. Munter was reelected for a second term as president of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association last night. He accepted office on condition he not be nominated for a third term.

Other officers for 1941 include Clayton B. Aldrich, reelected vice president for a second term; Morris Blumenthal, second vice president; George E. Dieffenbach, reelected secretary and treasurer for a fourth term; A. B. Waller, assistant secretary; Francis C. Heigle (reelected) and J. M. Heiser, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The Capital Transit Co. was urged to proceed immediately with completing of a terminal at Chevy Chase Circle, following a talk by James M. Bennett, company official, who explained that the delay was due to covenants in the deeds limiting the use of the land to residences. The association suggested that the covenant be disregarded since the terminal was community necessity.

Bennett said that the transit company also was considering proposals for an uptown crosstown bus route, although company experts did not believe the route would pay for itself.

The association urged improvement in transit service from Barnaby Woods section, particularly requesting through buses to downtown Washington.

The unit reaffirmed its stand in favor of suffrage, asked for establishment of a rifle range at Woodrow Wilson High School, and requested more frequent collection of trash. The executive committee announced that it would waive dues of any of the organization's 2,051 members who joined the active or reserve military forces.

Dahlgren Terrace

Mandatory jail sentences for automobilists convicted of reckless or drunk driving were proposed by the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association last night as a weapon to cut down the District traffic toll.

The association also voted to send representatives to budget hearings of the House and District Committees in an effort to obtain action on Police Chief Brown's recommendation for 100 additional policemen, cut to 20 by the Commissioners.

A vote of confidence was given Traffic Director Van Duzer, after agreement that the principal traffic need was for more stringent enforcement of laws, with no favoritism.

In addition, the association called for a traffic light at Tenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. The association met at Crosby Noyes School, Tenth and Evarts Streets Northeast.

Sixteenth St. Highlands

The Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association last night invited a representative of the Traffic Department to attend the next regular meeting of the association to explain why a light has not been placed at Fourteenth and Kennedy Streets and Colorado Avenue Northwest.

The association reiterated its stand in favor of a crosstown bus line and appointed a representative to attend a meeting of citizens to discuss the project January 22.

Robert Davis Named to D. C. Building Post

Robert Henry Davis, 53, yesterday was named acting building inspector for the District during the absence of Col. John W. Oehmann who has been called to military duty.

DAVIS

Col. Oehmann was granted two years' leave for military duty and his job will be held for him by the Commissioners. Davis, who has served the municipal government for 18 years, has been engineer computer for the building inspection department.

He entered the District service in 1911 as an employe of the surveyor's office and transferred to the inspection department in 1919. He spent several years in private employment. He is married and resides with his wife and two children at 4836 Albemarle Street Northwest. For the next two weeks while Col. Oehmann is on leave for training at Camp Meade, Davis will receive his former salary of $3,200. After the two-week period, when Col. Oehman will be inducted into military service, Davis' appointment will be that of fulltime Building Inspector and Director of Inspection at a salary of $5,600.

32 Graduated By District's Police School

Rookies Face Test With Metropolitan Veterans Monday

Thirty-two rookie policemen last night were graduated from a three-month training course and told that they will be competing on Inauguration Day with the cream of the New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore forces.

The challenge to the new bluecoats was presented by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, who urged them to make the District proud of them when they work beside other metropolitan units Monday. The police chief spoke at the graduation banquet in the Continental Hotel.

Maj. Brown told the graduates that the District had a $500 investment in each man's training and said he hoped the District draft boards will give "careful consideration" to the Capital's police needs in selecting men for military training.

"Six hundred of our men are eligible for the draft," Brown said, "and I am very much concerned lest it disrupt our work."

Other speakers include Capt. E. F. Mitchell, of the National Rifle Association, who presented four men with medals for marksmanship; Inspectors Edward J. Kelly, William G. Stott and Arthur E. Miller; Capts. Ira Keck and Harvey G. Callahan; Lieuts. John Fowler and Earl Hartman, and Sergts. Joseph Harrington and H. R. Lamb.

Lieut. Beverly C. Beach, chief instructor of the police school, was unable to attend, and Sergt. Lamb, the assistant instructor, presented the class to Maj. Brown.

The medal winners in marksmanship were Adam A. Zoncko, William R. Hyder and James P. Phillips in the regulation match, and Zonko, Winter B. Stevens and Hyder in a special match. T. Gillespie Walsh, Washington attorney, was master of ceremonies at the banquet.

Sasscer Is Victim Of Handbag Mixup

Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, ran into difficulty Tuesday night which was settled only in the small hours yesterday after police had scoured the roads in search for him.

Leaving a downtown hotel, Sasscer inadvertenly was given the wrong handbag. He was on his way home before the mixup was discovered by the hotel and a police lookout was broadcast.

When he arrived in Marlboro, Md., he realized the error and telephoned the hotel, which sent out his bag and picked up the one he had.

Part of Airport Stolen Already

It was bolted down, but that didn't help. Thieves yesterday simply loosened the bolts that held a bronze marker in place on a concrete runway and thus stole part of the new National Airport.

The shield-shaped tablet, about 10 inches long, proclaimed the runway as the world's largest strip of paving of its kind.

400 View New High School In Southwest

Four hundred residents and friends of Southwest Washington last night inspected the new Thomas Jefferson High School, and heard a half-dozen speakers praise it as the nucleus of a model community development.

The $1,000,000 building, which contains recreation and community centers, and is flanked by a new branch library and a health clinic, was called second to none in Washington or elsewhere by speakers including Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Hugh S. Smith, school principal; Miss Virginia McLaughlin, librarian of the new branch; Louis Mitchell, recreation director; Commander Raymond Smith, of the Department of Agriculture American Legion Post, and Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association.

Wender, who presided, traced improvements in Southwest in the past five years culminating in the new school, and envisioned yet greater community progress to come.

North of the school a sizable recreation and playground area is to be developed and to the south the waterfront area is to be beautified to become a fitting Potomac "portal to the Capital," he said.

The association head also pointed to the impending demolition of slum building, whose tenants have been evacuated, and foresaw the construction of a bridge or tunnel providing a traffic link between Southwest and Southeast. Also to be sought was a new elementary school, he asserted.

3 States Hunt Airplane Stolen At Alexandria

A red sport plane, formerly owned by a Pennsylvania Central Airlines pilot who is now flying American bombers across the Atlantic to England, yesterday was the object of a widespread police search in Virginia, Florida and Illinois.

The plane, a cub coupe valued at $1,800, disappeared from Beacon Airport, near Alexandria, Va., on January 8. Police believe that it was flown to Miami by an airport hanger-on for last week-end's air mneuvers.

The plane was owned by Thomas L. Davis until the P. C. A. pilot gave up his job here for more adventurous work in Canada. Davis sold it to the Aviation Credit Corporation of St. Louis, Mo. T. Douglas Schall, Washington representative of the credit company, discovered the absence of the plane Tuesday.

Police learned that the plane was seen in Miami Monday and were investigating the possibility that the man suspected of taking it had flown from there to his family home in Illinois.

Temperance Group Assails Army Drinking

Pledges Drive to 'Better Environment' Of Military Selects

Resolutions deprecating conditions near military camps, "in respect to vice and alcoholic beverages," and pledging cooperation in creating a better environment for trainees were adopted yesterday by the National Temperance and Prohibition Council.

Meeting at the International Reform Federation headquarters, 134 B Street Northeast, the council called attention to the passing of the Selective Service Act, and the urge for speed in the defense program, then declared:

"If we are to achieve the highest efficiency at such a time, we must take cognizance of those things in our national life which experience has shown are antisocial in character and detrimental to the building of a high morale among the people."

Pledging their support of "every practical effort to achieve an adequate national defense," the delegates urged Congress to enact such legislation "as may be appropriate under our present peacetime status for the protection of our military and naval services from the effects of vice and liquor conditions."

The resolutions also urged Congress to "enact into law the recommendations repeatedly made by the administrative agencies of the Federal Government for better and more effective enforcement of the Federal liquor laws."

Heading the resolutions' signers were by Arthur J. Barton, chairman, and general secretary of the Commission on Morals and Temperance of the Southern Baptist Convention.

So You Think You've Got Troubles!

When they wanted water, they couldn't get it.

When they didn't want it, there was plenty.

Dr. Robert W. McCullough, secretary of the Capital Speedway Corporation, told Judge Nathan Cayton yesterday that such was his company's experience.

The corporation, which runs midget automobile races, was sued in the Municipal Court by Amberger & Wohlforth, Inc., plumbers, for $900 for nine sprinkling jets.

Dr. McCullough testified the jets wouldn't sprinkle and he had to call the Fire Department when he wanted to wet down the track. But when races were scheduled on Tuesday nights, it rained, he said.

Judge Cayton negotiated a $675 settlement.

More Judges For District Court Urged

Clerk Suggests 'Borrowing' Six To Clear Docket, Far in Arrears

Col. Charles E. Stewart, clerk, yesterday proposed that half a dozen jurists be "borrowed" from other circuits, in order to bring the congested District Court docket up to date.

The utmost efforts of the present bench of 12 judges, Col. Stewart said, would not clear the jam, which has slowed up justice here for years.

The court disposed of 953 civil actions in the last six months of 1940. But 2,134 were filed in the same period. This means that about 5,000 Washington people whose cases are ready for trial must wait 12 to 16 months to have their differences decided.

Col. Stewart suggested that judges be brought from other Federal circuits, where business is slack, to hold court here until the docket is up to date. Then, he said, appointment of one or two additional permanent justices would enable the court to keep abreast of its work.

Court Business Increasing

From the records of the court Col. Stewart cited statistics which showed a great increase in business. Beside the civil cases which are far behind, the court handles criminal trials, bankruptcies, adoptions and other business, virtually all of which is about up to date.

Col. Stewart made this comparison of the total of all types of cases in fiscal years, ending June 30 of the years indicated:

5,356	1930
5,334	1931
4,979	1932
4,429	1933
4,236	1934
4,350	1935
5,500	1936
6,145	1937
5,178	1938
5,742	1939
5,152	1940

The court was increased a decade ago from six to nine judges, who cut the pending case total by 20 per cent by 1934. However, increased business owing to new laws and growing population here—from 486,869 in 1930 to 663,152 in 1940—abruptly halted the gain, despite addition of three more judges three years ago.

Civil Actions Slighted

Emphasizing that the court kept its work well in control except the civil actions (formerly styled "law" and "equity" cases), Col. Stewart cited these reports of cases pending at the end of the fiscal years indicated:

Year.	Civil Actions.	Total Cases.
1938	4,756	5,178
1939	4,947	5,742
1940	4,376	5,152

There were 8,627 cases disposed of in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1940. Col. Stewart computed that this was an average of 784 cases per judge, against an average of 734 cases per judge.

Thus, said Col. Stewart, it was apparent that outside help would be necessary to bring the docket up to date, because there is a limit to the work a judge can do.

Must Certify Necessity

According to law, to get judges from another circuit, the justices of the District Court would have to ask for them, certifying the necessity to Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the United States Court of Appeals here. The desired judges could not come from other States unless they in turn certified to their own senior circuit judges that business in their districts would not suffer in their absence. Should these senior circuit judges consent, then the desired District judges could come to Washington.

Col. Stewart said he felt that procedure of this nature was the solution of the jammed court business, rather than having the present justices here work on Saturdays and reduce their vacations of two months or more, as was proposed by a committee of the District Bar Association two years ago.

The initiative in this or other remedies for the situation, however, must come from the District Court.

Georgetown Overwhelms Army Five, 40 to 28

Hoyas Lead All the Way; O'Grady Star

Army Loses Third Straight; Victory Is Seventh in Row For Georgetown Five

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 15.—Scoring almost at will, the Hoyas of Georgetown defeated Army's yet-to-win basketball team, 40-28, here today for their seventh straight victory of the season.

From the time Jim Kiernan put the visitors in front with a trick field goal, the outcome of the contest was never in doubt. Kiernan accounted for eight points in all during the afternoon, but it was Buddy O'Grady who copped the scoring honors with 14 points on five field goals and four foul shots.

Third Loss for Army

This was West Point's third defeat in a week. Harvard opened Army's season by winning an overtime thriller last Wednesday, and Princeton duplicated the trick over the week end, in overtime.

Georgetown moved into the lead from the start on two pointers by Kiernan, O'Grady and two by Bill Bornheimer. Army rallied for 6 points, but that was the closest the game ever got. At one time, late in the game, the Hoyas were ahead by 15 points, and it looked to the crowd of 2,000 that they could have extended the margin if they chose to do so.

Hoyas Lead at Half

The half ended 21-12, in Georgetown's favor. The second half started out as a scoring duel between O'Grady and Paul Kemp, Army forward. Each accounted for 4 points in the opening minutes of the last period until Georgie Pajak sunk two foul shots.

Georgetown, the fans generally agreed, was the best team to show its face at West Point in a long, long time. Their passing and basket aiming was superb, except late in the game when a natural letdown might be expected, and there was little criticism about their defense efforts. Army rarely penetrated past the enemy foul line.

Hockey Eagles Beat Skeeters In Overtime

Special Dispatch to The Post

River Vale, N. J., Jan. 15.—Ross Knipfel skated madly the length of the rink after one minute of the overtime period to tally unassisted and give the league leading Washington Eagles a 5-3 victory over the Skeeters, in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game here tonight.

It was the fourth defeat for the Skeeters at the hands of the Eagles on their own rink, and the seventh loss to Washington for the season. The best the Skeeters have gained thus far against the Eagles is a tie.

Jack MacBeth, assisted by Burns and McCurry, put in a fifth Washington goal at 8:13 of the overtime period.

River Vale was first to chalk up a goal, as Bob Nilon took a rebound of Les Colvin to put the puck into the Eagles net at 8:29 of the first period. River Vale defenseman, Bus Portland, was sent to the penalty pew for checking to the boards in the final minutes of the period. On his return to the ice, he committed a holding foul to avert a Washington goal, and was sent back immediately to the penalty box.

The Eagles were held scoreless until 4:55 of the second period, when Len Burrage fed the puck to Courteau at the blueline, and Paul flipped it past Goalie Lessard, to tie the score at 1-all.

From that point neither team was able to crack the others defense during the remainder of the period. Colvin turned in a brilliant job at the net, frequently staving off what seemed certain goals.

Seldom penalized Jack MacBeth was sent to the box for slashing, as was Frank Mailley. MacGregor

Georgetown Five Host To New York Tonight

Violets Boast Enviable Record; Veteran Players Make Up Team; Contest Listed For Riverside, Preceded by Preliminary

Riding high on a seven-game winning streak and apparently getting better with every performance, Georgetown's surprisingly good court-men return home tonight to meet what looks to be the best team to show here this season—N. Y. U.

Riverside Stadium will be the scene of the clash between the two Eastern court powerhouses, at 8:30 p. m. A preliminary at 7:30 will bring together the University of Maryland freshmen and the Hoya frosh.

The Violets, winners of 18 out of 19 games last year and 8 out of 9 this season, will be in the right mood to meet up with the Hoyas' winning streak, for they had one of their own snapped last Friday by an in-and-out Penn State team.

Four of the Violet boys who won 18 straight for the Violets last year and beat Georgetown, 50-27, in Madison Square Garden, are back this year, Eddie Stevens, Irving Davis, Benny Auerbach and Ralph Kaplowitz are the veterans, while Morton Lazar fits right into the combination, in place of former captain Al Lewis, Kaplowitz and Stevens are the leading scorers.

Baltimore Loyola Victor

The Hoyas have been commanding rave notices since the first three games this season. After losing to a good Loyola of Baltimore combination the Hoyas played two more games here, beating Western Maryland and American by comparatively small margins.

Then Coach Elmer Ripley's charges showed an about face and won two big road games, Loyola of Chicago and Canisius.

They came home and upset George Washington, handed Temple its second defeat of the season in the Philadelphia Coliseum and yesterday was called "one of the best teams to show at West Point in years" as it routed an Army team that had lost two previous overtime decisions to Harvard and Princeton.

The Hoyas have three consistent high-scoring threats in addition to Charlie Schmidli, who just about won the G. W. game with nine field goals, all of the long-shot variety. Bill Bornheimer, the soph star of the club, is rated the best center in town; Jim Kiernan has few equals at pot shots, while twice this season

Caddy Trails Battle Creek Pro With 69

Denny Shute, Byrd Have 70s in First Qualifying Round Of Match Play Open

By the United Press

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—Chick Harbert, former amateur star, today got his first taste of winter golf money when he rang up a hot 67, 5 under par, to lead the field in the first qualifying round of the $5,000 San Francisco match play open.

Playing in showers on the soggy Presidio course, the 25-year-old pro from Battle Creek, Mich., was two strokes ahead of another youngster, Marion Heifner, of Denver, caddy at the Stanford University course, who was alone in second place at 69.

Harbert, making his first winter swing with the money players, could not even finish in the Los Angeles Open and the Oakland Open, being cut out with the stragglers at the end of the third round in each tournament.

Leader Has 33-34

But today he waded around the 6,600-yard course in championship form, going out in 33 and back in 34. Heifner had 34-35.

Five professionals had 70. Denny Shute, of West Newton, Mass., Sam Byrd, of Ardmore, Pa.; Zell Eaton, of Brownsville, Tex.; Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., and Emrick Kocis, of Lake Orin, Mich. Two pros had 71's, Eduardo Blasi, of Buenos Aires, and John Perelli, of Lake Tahoe, Calif.

Of the 168 starters, 30 were still on the course when darkness fell and will have to finish their rounds tomorrow morning. The best 100 first-round scorers will go on to the second half of the qualifying round.

Hines, Snead Have 72

In the par 72 bracket were the two amateurs, George Schoux of San Matero and tennis champion Ellsworth Vines. With them were the professionals Jimmy Hines, Great Neck, N. Y.; Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J.; Ray Mangrum, Ooak Park, Ill.; Sam Snead, Hot Springs, Va.; Lawson Little, San Francisco; Jim Demaret, Houston, Tex. Jim Gauntt, Longview, Tex., and Tony Penna, Dayton, Ohio.

First-round casualties included Ralph Guldahl, Chicago, 78; Harold McSpaden, Winchester, Pa., 78; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., 75; Harry Cooper, New London, Conn., 76, and Leonard Dodson, Kansas City, 77.

The course was waterlogged after a month of rains, and more showers were predicted for the rest of the week.

Two Matches Friday

After tomorrow's second 18 holes, the best 32 medal scorers start their "sudden death" matches—2 rounds a day Friday and Saturday at 18 holes, which will leave the finalists for a 36-hole match Sunday.

The medalist gets $400. Champion receives $1,000, losing finalist $500, losing quarter-finalist $150, the 8 second-round losers $100 and the 16 first-round losers $75 each.

Harbert had a good amateur record before turning professional. In 1937 he set a world's record of 268 for 72 holes on a par 72 course when he won the Michigan Open. Craig Wood broke that record last year with a 264 in the Metropolitan Open. Harbert was a quarter-finalist on the National Amateur of 1938 and won the trans-Mississippi championship in 1939.

V. M. I. Blasts Maryland by 64-30 Score

Sotnyk's 20 Points Lead Ruthless Offense On Lexington Court

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Jan. 15.—V. M. I. cagers hit on all cylinders here tonight to defeat the University of Maryland 64-to-30.

The Cadets' attack was paced by Emil Sotnyk, sophomore guard from Ford City, Pa., with 20 points. Six of his second-half field goals hit the hoops from far out on the floor.

Dick Williams, Jack Woodward and Capt. Bob Foster knifed through the Terrapins' defense for ten points in the first eight minutes, while guarding closely to hold the visitors scoreless. When the Terps shifted to zone defense, Foster and Sotnyk found the range outside the foul circle to run up a 30-to-9 half-time lead.

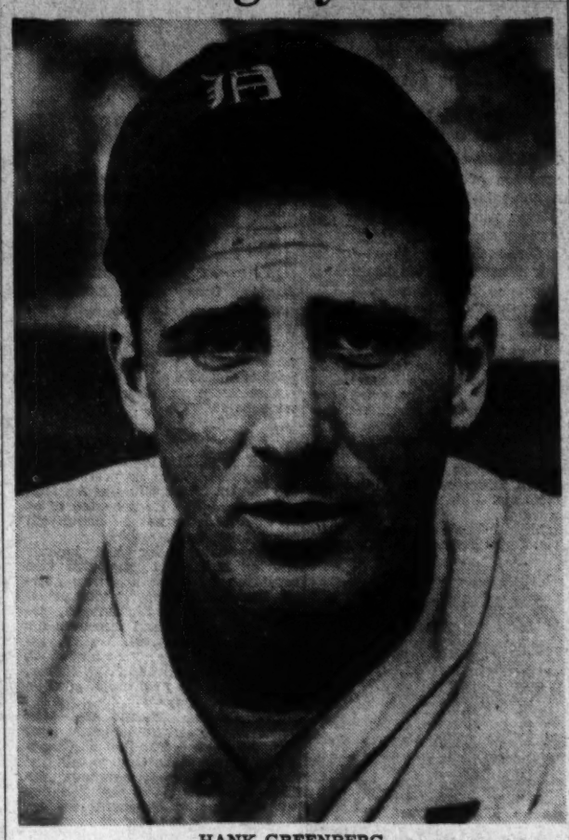
Army May Get Tigers' Greenberg by June 1



HANK GREENBERG

Selective Service Official Says Big Hank, American League's Most Valuable Player, Will Get Questionnaire; May Be Called in May

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Jan. 15.—A Selective Service official said today that big Hank Greenberg, Detroit Tiger outfielder and most valuable American League player last year, "probably will be in the Army by June 1."

W. H. Wells, chief clerk of Draft Board No. 23, said Greenberg, who holds order No. 621, would be mailed a draft questionnaire "within two or three weeks."

"If the number of draftees into the Army continues at the present rate," Wells said, "Greenberg probably will be called some time in May and hardly later than June 1."

Wells said this was contingent upon the outfielder's classification in Class 1 and passing of the physical examination.

He said Greenberg, the league's home-run king who is reputed to be the highest salaried player in baseball, had discussed his case with draft officials "several months ago."

"He indicated he would not ask for deferment," Wells said.

Thus far 449 questionnaires have been sent out by the board at the rate of 25 a day.

Wells said that the number of men called, the number deferred, and the date of subsequent inductions would determine when Greenberg would be summoned.

Greenberg, 29, is reported vacation-bound for Honolulu. He is scheduled to report for spring training at the Tigers camp March 2, at Lakeland, Fla.

The big outfielder, shifted to left field from first base last year, was a big factor in Detroit's pennant drive. His loss would be a blow to the Tigers, who are barred by a league rule from making intraleague trades.

Redskin Chief Leaves for Coast; Has No Comment

George P. Marshall, owner of 55 per cent of the Redskins, yesterday entrained for a six-week trip to California, without saying whether he had any knowledge of the "secret" meeting of the National Pro Fotball League.

Officials at the Redskin office said they were entirely in the dark about the meeting which press association reports stated was to be held in Chicago. The meeting was called under rather mysterious circumstances and without the knowledge of League President Carl L. Storck. Marshall left for Los Angeles yesterday.

Navy Defeats Gettysburg Five, 36-25

Pennsylvanians Only Four Points Behind In Closing Minutes

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 15.—In a come-back after its loss to Columbia, Navy trounced Gettysburg College's basketball team today, 36 to 25, here this afternoon.

Paced by Bob Zoeller and Charley Smith, whose sharpshooting accounted for 21 points, the Tars started slowly but finally got a scoring combination going and held a 24-15 advantage at half time.

In the closing minutes play turned wild and rough and Gettysburg pulled to within 4 points of the Midshipmen. With the score 29 to 25 for Navy, John McTighe and Lou Squires, Tar subs, teamed with Zoeller in a rally good for 7 more points.

Two Giants Sign

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—The receipt of the signed contracts of First Baseman Johnny McCarthy and Rookie Pitcher John Wittig was announced today by the New York Giants, bringing to nine the number of players signed.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There's a plan afoot, and not a very bright one, to give the heave-ho to Carl L. Storck, president of the National Football League. Acting like kids with a pout, adult club owners, obviously disgruntled, have scheduled a "secret" meeting at Chicago today to further their plot.

POVICH

That they're out to "get" Storck is obvious, too. They tried it last April at the annual league meeting in New York, when a faction led by the Redskins' owner attempted to unseat Storck as president of the league and succeeded only in stripping him of most of his authority. They generously permitted him to keep his league pass. They probably would have fired him if they had not lost their nerve when they were fried by the New York press for their intent.

If it's a league meeting that they're scheduling in Chicago today President Storck doesn't know anything about it. He said as much when I talked to him by telephone the other day. "I talked to two club owners today and they didn't mention anything about any kind of a meeting," said Storck. But the Associated Press reports that there will be a meeting and that agency also reported that Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, had already turned down the job as high commissioner of the league.

Why all the fuss about Storck? Well, the Redskins' owner is sore at him because he wouldn't reverse the famous decision of Referee Bill Halloran, who ruled Bo Russell's place kick "no good" in the 9-7 Redskins-Giant game of 1939. Dan Topping, owner of Brooklyn, is sore at him because he permitted the Philadelphia Eagles to play two games in four days, thus jeopardizing Brooklyn's chances to tie for the 1940 Eastern Division title.

And George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears, doubtless didn't like the way Mr. Storck pushed the rule that terminated the Bears' cute little trick of buying up draft choices of the weaker clubs in the league.

Those apparently have been Storck's crimes—backing up his referees, protecting the interests of one of the poorer clubs in the league that was forced to postpone a game, and refusing to countenance the Bears' habit of gobbling up the graduating college stars at the expense of the weaker clubs.

A year ago, the job of president of the league was mysteriously offered to G. Edgar Hoover following the Redskin owners' tiff with Storck. Every club owner denied he had made the offer to Hoover, which was strange inasmuch as Mr. Hoover in a formal statement turned down the offer he wasn't supposed to have received.

But the fellow seems to have done a whale of a job for the pro football league. Surely it has never been as prosperous as since he took over. And he has been working under the handicap of limited authority. The wonder is that he would care for the job, such as it is, but that is probably explainable by the man's love for pro football and his belief in its future. We know he is also yearning for the day when he can win back some of the power befitting a league president and crack the whip over some of the crybabies who are now only nominally in his charge.

Storck won this department by his frank and calm outline of his league's problems while in Washington six weeks ago. The man threatened then to leave his job flat unless the legislation he was going to introduce to curb the Bears from cornering the All-American market was approved. He wouldn't stand for the continuation of any such travesty on the draft, he said.

But the item that set Storck apart from the men he works with in the league was his attitude toward the draftees. "This league should work out some plan whereby the graduating college player should have some choice about which team he would like to play with. It's only natural that a boy should choose to join a winning team, and he doesn't get a square deal if he is forced to join a weak club. We ought to find a way to compensate him when he is drafted by a team that can't afford to pay him as well as one of the richer clubs."

And that's the kind of a guy they're plotting to fire.

New Team Rules Are Passed By Women's Golf Committee

Mrs. Weible's Plans Given Unanimous Vote By Executive Group and Chairmen

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The executive committee of the District Women's Golf Association, consisting of officers and chairmen of the 13 member clubs, passed by a unanimous vote all new recommendations of the 1941 president, Mrs. Walter Weible, and her committee in a meeting yesterday at Kenwood Country Club.

Most important was adopting the new system of team play including many radical changes over last year's method. The new system was presented by Mrs. George E. Stratemeyer.

The executive committee also approved of scheduling tournaments through July and August, to lift the burden from the spring and fall months and give the schedule a more even distribution. Heretofore association members complained they worked on their games, reached a peak around June, and then the tournaments were dropped until September and they lost the touch. This was a recommendation of Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, former tournament chairman.

To Remeasure Courses

Mrs. Weible's move to have a "B" class handicap chairman named as well as an "A" class chairman was also adopted, and the president named Mrs. H. J. Beech, Manor, as "A" chairman, and Mrs. E. A. Swingle, Congressional, to the "B" division. A proposed amendment to the constitution to have the handicap chairman made officers will probably be passed at a later meeting.

It was also approved that a committee be named to remeasure the courses in order to get the exact yardage for computing women's par. Mrs. W. B. Jarvis, Columbia, was named chairman, with Mrs. J. A. Anderson, Argyle, and Mrs. Charles L. Vaile, Kenwood, as assistants.

Principal changes in the team play, announced by Mrs. Stratemeyer and committee and approved by Mrs. Weible two weeks ago, are: It will not be necessary to enter a first team to be represented by a second; first teams will play from scratch and second and third from handicaps, six members on each; there will be no substitutes allowed, no postponements and two defaults

Mize to Shoot for New Homer Mark

Cardinal Slugger Starts His Training Four Weeks Earlier

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 15.—A former manager of the Cardinals once said if Johnny Mize would start a season without being overweight he'd hit so many home runs that Babe Ruth's record of 60 would be in real jeopardy.

Last year Mize reported fat, played the early part of the season wearing a rubber sweat shirt and yet managed, despite a poor beginning, to lead both leagues in homers with 43.

The big first-baseman, who acknowledged an average of close to .999 at the food plate this winter, admitted today he was 20 pounds heavier than his best playing weight of 215 pounds.

But—and this means watch out, Babe Ruth's record—Mize is going into training four weeks early in an effort to get into condition before reporting at the Cardinals' spring camp in St. Petersburg, Fla., February 28.

"I'm going to Hot Springs about February 1," he said, "and take the baths and play some golf to lose weight. I hope to take off at least 15 pounds before I go to Florida."

When the season opens on National League fences, Mize expects to start firing home runs from the very first day, and he sees that "60" of Ruth's well within reach.

"Every year since I've been up in the majors, I've hit a few more," he said, "and I expect to keep improving."

A powerful hitter, Mize swings a bat "like a toothpick," to use a trite but true expression. Bothered by a shoulder injury for a while last year, he actually hit several home runs while batting virtually one-handed.

Ceccoti Ties Score For Hosts With 2 Minutes Remaining; Zunic Leads G. W. U.

Greenville, S. C., Jan. 15.—Capt. Comer sank a one-handed flip shot from the deep corner in the last 10 seconds of play to lift the George Washington Colonials to a 37-36 basketball victory over Furman's Paladins here tonight.

Their fast-breaking offense held to a minimum efficiency by the Hurricane, the Colonials almost missed making a clean sweep of their invasion of South Carolina. They previously defeated Clemson and South Carolina.

Ceccotti's long-distance shots carried the score to the even mark with two minutes left to play. The Paladins went ahead on a long one by Ceccotti and "froze" the ball until the last 30 seconds when the Colonials broke up a pass and Comer sank the game-winning goal.

Wilson Owls Win Over Shenandoah

Teachers' Hal Ifshin Steals Scoring Show; Visitors Outlasted

The Wilson Teachers College Owls outlasted a game Shenandoah College basketball team last night at Tech High gymnasium and came through with a 55-44 victory.

The business started out as though it would be a neck-and-neck struggle all the way with Hal Ifshin, Wilson's sharp-shooting forward, and Shenandoah's White staging a spirited scoring duel.

At the quarter the visitors had tied up the count at 13-13, but the Owls drew away to a 30-22 lead at half time and then opened up to steadily draw away each time Shenandoah threatened. Ifshin, with 16 points in the first half, shot a total of 24, while White shot 14. It was Wilson's fifth victory against three losses.

The third game of Wilson Teachers College four home tilts in six days will be played tonight at 8 in the Wilson gym when the Teachers encounter Maryland State Normal, of Towson, Md.

Iowa Opens '41 Season With Drake Eleven

Iowa City, Iowa, Jan. 15 (AP).—Iowa will open its 1941 football season against Drake University September 27, E. G. Schroeder, athletic director, announced tonight.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

CONSIDINE

All at Sea (by Albatross).—Did you know that in the warm springs of Puna murmer the voices of royal lovers of long ago, who, sundered by destiny and the demands of state, chose death together rather than life apart, and in Puna's bubbling waters they still whisper "Aloha . . . aloha?"

No kidding, it says so right in the travel book, and if that doesn't constitute a new intersectional record for holding your breath under water, well, I'd like to know what does. We'll want to get a load of Puna and its underwater treaders as soon as the Matsonia nuzzles into port. Boy! Pump up my diving bell.

Until then we'll get our exercise by entering into gala exhilarating deck sports and a new and vigorous exercise which I have tentatively named dragging your madam away from the ship's slot machine room, screaming. She's still trying to get three lemons, which any old two-cherry-and-a-bell addict will tell you is rendered a trifle difficult by the fact that there isn't any lemon on the middle roller.

There's enough to do around a boat like this, if a man's fool enough to stir out of his chair, or make a move toward anything except the dining room. There is deck tennis, a kind of hybrid between horseshoes, badminton and being chased by the bloodhounds over ice.

And ping pong, which is turned into a dangerous sport until you get your sea legs. You're likely to lurch into a sharp corner of the table and commit hari kari. And there are other diabolical devices for deviling a comfortably sluggish liver, including a gym with one of those Cal Coolidge electric giddy-yaps.

We had a good scrap on one of the rear decks today. Tony Olivera, about the best bantamweight in the fight business, boxed four rounds with a couple of sparmates. He's faster than a buck on the 50-cent slot machine. Hits well, too. He bloodied up a hairy Japanese sparring partner, even with the heavy gloves, causing an elderly armchair admiral to pop open a bottle of Chablis at the bar and announce that the Pacific was at least free of the yellow peril.

You don't get the Sierra Madres in the background, but the mid-ocean race course will do until we can get back to Santa Anita. It is located on the widest of the several rear decks, and waiters serve you raspberry sherbet, if you don't watch out, while those wooden Sea-biscuits scrape by.

The horses are motivated, as usual, by the roll of dice. They have steeplechases, too, and pretty maddening things they are when old No. 6—through whose rings and knots flows some of the finest thoroughbred sap this side of the Louisville slugger factory—comes a cropper and can't get over because he needs a pair of sixes, on the dice, to enable him to clear the bar.

While a lot of cheap selling platers like No. 4 and that incorrigible in-and-outer, No. 1, come pounding around toward the finish line. We had a mutuel ticket today on a sure thing. We had assurances from a nautical tout that it was a boat race. Then some kid kicked over a glass of lemonade on the track, changed track conditions and there we were, holding a no-good ticket again, 5,211 miles from Belmont.

We got some more jumpers tonight when they showed the picture "Maryland." It's a little old, but that can be explained by the 5½-hour difference in time between where we are and the Roxy. It packs some of the finest corn ever reduced to Technicolor, and while some of the hunting scenes are as engaging as a Currier and Ives, made to live, we suspect that Maryland's horsey set was pretty much stunned by Hollywood's concept of Maryland's horsey set. It is a horsey State, all right, but by and large its horseback hunters and jumpers are folks of mild, or no, circumstances who would rather buy another bushel of oats than make a down payment on a pink coat. And, incidentally, we're still looking for a horse movie which doesn't show the hero-jockey in a close-up, coming down the home stretch, crouching on that kitchen chair or whatever it is they prop them up on when they take those hilariously synthetic close-ups.

A surprising number of the people on the boat made the trip to the mainland just to see the Rose Bowl game. One old grad from Stanford, a Honolulu attorney named Abe Lewis, was pretty upset over some of the stories the sportswriters wrote, about the time of the bowl game. "You fellows keep saying that the first bowl game was in 1900 or 1901, when Fielding Yost brought his Michigan team out to play as a kind of side attraction for the Tournament of Roses. No such thing! I played in the first such game. It was on January 1, 1895. Stanford played the University of Chicago. Walter Camp was coaching us . . . I played left end . . . and A. A. Stag coached Chicago. Camp and Stagg were old friends and arranged the game just as a friendly gesture. Nobody ever thought of playing football that time of year, but we did. We won, too, 12-0.

"I see where some of our Stanford boys wanted to be paid $50 for appearing in the game—inasmuch as they missed a chance to pick up a Christmas vacation job. Well, sir, they wouldn't have had a chance to get it from the treasurer of our 1895 team. He made us stay amateur. Boy, did he hug those nickels! Fellow named Hoover . . . Yeah, Herbert."

Friends Rally Fails; Landon Wins, 39-33

Newmyer, C. Smith Lead Late Surge For Losing Five

A last-period rally by Friends fell short yesterday as the host five lost to Landon, 39 to 33. The winners took a 12-to-4 lead at the end of the initial quarter and urged it to 24-7 at intermission. Landon's third-period margin was 31-19.

In the final stanza of play, shots by Arnaud Newmyer and C. Smith put Friends in the running but the visitors put a halt to the rally for their victory. Besides two field goals, Newmyer tallied 9 out of 11 free tosses. Guard Smith played a polished floor game.

Center Paul Baker, of Landon, was top scorer of the game with 14 points. Brawner and Alford also scored consistently for the winners with 11 and 8 points, respectively.

Long Island Wins In Garden, 44-30

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Long Island University, its string of basketball triumphs broken by Michigan State on its last appearance in Madison Square Garden, came back after a dilatory first half tonight to defeat Depaul, of Chicago, 44 to 30.

Bradley Tech gave the Midwest an even break in the double-header, played before a crowd of 11,602, by whipping St. Francis, 58 to 47, in theo pening game.

National Pro Grid Owners Hold Meeting

By International News Service

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Professional football took steps to improve its own future tonight and at the same time was the recipient of an unexpected boost from a baseball mogul, Branch Rickey, of St. Louis, who predicted the pro grid game would take the spotlight away from the college sport within a few years.

On their own, proprietors of the National Professional Football League clubs gathered in Chicago for a mystery-shrouded meeting which rumor said was to name a high commissioner for the sport. The advantages of an all-powerful commissioner for pro football would be the same as those for baseball—stability, organization, consistency, order.

Baseball got all that when it appointed Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis as high commissioner in 1922.

Rickey gave pro football a boost in a talk to the Chicago Association of Commerce. He predicted:

"The pro gridders are acquiring a spirit that gives them the same popular glamour as the collegians and with that they have been acquiring a greater perfection in the sport."

The football club owners' meeting, meanwhile, attracted a welter of rumor. In the first place the owners tried to keep the meeting secret, so when it was discovered it assumed an aspect of importance.

Carl Storck, of Dayton, Ohio, president of the league for two years, is considered certain to lose his job because of differences he has had with club owners. It was reliably reported that Arch Ward, a Chicago sports editor, was offered Storck's job, but turned it down.

Ward, Storck Swap Verbal Thrusts

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP).—Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, declared tonight on the eve of a meeting of National Professional Football League executives that the ten-year offer he received to become commissioner of the league was an "official act."

It had "the unanimous indorsement of the club owners of the league," Ward asserted in commenting on a statement by Carl Storck, league president, that the announcement of an offer to Ward was "just so much wind," and that the commissionership never had been discusssed.

U. of Md. to Be Strong on Track Despite Graduation Losses

Though three of its greatest track stars of recent years have been graduated, Maryland's Terrapins are looking forward to another successful year on the cinders. Chances are "Swede" Eppley's team won't repeat its 1940 performance of winning three major titles in the Penn Relays, but it'll probably be tough as ever to lick in a dual meet.

Right now Maryland is in training for the opening indoor track meet in this vicinity, the annual Maryland-Fifth Regiment games in Baltimore March 7, and headed by Sprinter Joe Murphy, the Terps will be represented there by a strong contingent.

Besides Murphy, the Southern Conference 100 and 220 champion, Maryland's big guns this year are expected to be Gene Ochsenreiter, 440 and 880 specialist, who is now engaged in basketball; Bob Condon, half-miler; Tom Fields, miler and two-miler, and Bill Tilley, broad jumper. Fields, who was one of the leading figures in Maryland's surprising 1940 cleanup of Penn Relays honors, is counted on to develop into a miler as good as was Mason Chronister, graduated ace.

Greatest losses from the 1940 team were Chronister, Jim Kehoe, the middle distance star, and Alan Miller, former conference quarter-mile titlist. Miller and Chronister, incidentally, are in the Army and Marine Corps, respectively, with commissions as second lieutenants.

The absence of Kohoe won't be felt near so severely as some believe, however, because coming up to take his place is none other than his younger brother, Stirling, who last year was numbered among the finest half-milers in the high school ranks. Young Kohoe will be recalled by local track followers as a consistent winner in the recent Maryland Field Days where, competing for Bel Air High, he was tops in his specialty and also ran with the mile relay team.

Ken Overlin Fights Munley February 3

Allentown Bout Listed; Ken Works Here Today For Cisco Battle Tuesday

Ken Overlin, who is marking time until Chris Dundee gets him another big-time fight, will meet Jack Munley February 3 in Allentown, Pa., it was announced by Dundee yesterday in New York.

A busy trainer who never lets up despite 13 years of campaigning in fight rings all over the world, Ken is at present working out for his Tuesday night date with Tony Cisco, Norristown (Pa.) middleweight who's said to have a mad on at Kenneth.

The middleweight champion, New York-California version, will work out today at 1 p. m. at the Huron gymnasium, 511 Eleventh Street Northwest, and Cisco will arrive tomorrow for a series of public workouts. Promoter Joe Turner is hoisting his prices to a $3.60 top.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez is billing the champion's fight with Cisco as a grudge battle. It's a 10-round nontitle affair, and Philadelphia promoters already have made a bid for a rematch if Overlin loses to the Pennsylvanian.

Cisco, formerly a stablemate of Overlin, is now handled by Jake Freedman. While managed by Dundee, Cisco was continuously "beefing" that Dundee wouldn't give him a chance and favored Overlin, the story goes.

Meanwhile, fight interest for tonight turns to Baltimore, where Jackie Wilson meets Maxie Shapiro in a 10-round featherweight bout at the Coliseum under promotion of Fred Squire and Jack Laken.

Georgie Abrams, Overlin's stablemate, meets Jimmy Leto in a 10-rounder in Baltimore Monday night in Carlin's Arena under promotion of the Century A. C. Dundee will work in Abrams' corner Monday night and come to Washington Tuesday to work in Overlin's corner.

Cochran and Lookabaugh Billiard Victors

Herb Peterson, Kenny Bow; Clarence Jackson Defeats Joe Moriarty

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, and Earle Lookabaugh, of Chicago, maintained their undefeated standing in the world three-cushion billiard tournament today.

Cochran won his second straight match by defeating Herb Peterson, of St. Louis, 50 to 31, in 56 innings. A run of eight in the seventeenth inning placed the West Coast veteran in control after he had made a slow start. The tournament opened Monday.

Lookabaugh followed with his second triumph at the expense of another Chicagoan, Len Kenney, who lost, 50 to 40, after making a strong bid for 50 innings. The match went 62 innings.

The third afternoon match brought Clarence Jackson, Detroit veteran, his first victory in two starts. He defeated Joe Moriarty, of Chicago, 50 to 29, in 57 innings, despite a run of eight by Moriarty.

Woodruff Receives Army Commission

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—John Woodruff, the long, tall colored runner from the University of Pittsburgh who won the 800-meter event in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin, is a brand-new second lieutenant in the 369th Coast Artillery, a local antiaircraft regiment.

John withdrew last month from New York University, where he was working for a master's degree, to devote his time to the regiment. Two days ago his outfit was inducted into the Regular Army, and Woodruff was one of 15 second lieutenants commissioned.

The 369th is scheduled to leave about January 1 for active service at Fort Ontario, N. Y.

Great Albert Triumphs in Race Feature at Hialeah Park

4-Year-Old Scores Over Beau James

Don Meade Earns Double Astride Winner; Many Stings Runs Out of Money

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 15.—Great Albert, a sprinter noted as much for his stopping tendencies as for his brilliant speed, held on better than usual here this afternoon and won the Grade "A" Handicap which topped the first set of such events presented at the current meeting. The Paragon Stable's 4-year-old lasted to beat Warren Wright's Beau James by a neck in the fast time of 1:10 2-5 for the six furlongs. Mrs. W. C. Stroube's Exarch was third, a length away.

Don Meade, leading rider at the meeting, earned a double astride Great Albert, which, in his previous start, had tossed off a wide lead in the Inaugural Handicap and finished fourth.

Clyde Tolson was fourth and Many Stings, hero of the rich Widener last winter, brought up the rear. Great Albert was weighted at 105 pounds but Meade was five pounds overweight, making the winner's weight 110. Great Albert was favorite at $5.30 for $2. His time was three-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

Meade, who excels on front running horses, let Great Albert sprint into a lead of a length or more. He nursed his mount along until forced to a hard drive through the stretch. Exarch forced most of the running, then Beau James made a desperate bid which came a trifle too late. Clyde Tolson easily beat Many Stings, which is not regarded as a sprinter.

IRISH IVY, away cleanly, raced true and responding to pressure, drew clear at the furlong pole to hold his opposition the remainder of the trip. SWEEP SWINGER, vigorously ridden from the start, finished in game fashion. SAM HOUSTON, quickest away, bore out sharply the first furlong and lost ground, but came again and would have been second in another stride. MAGIC MAY, alert at the start, took a brief lead the early stages, but faltered.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:31. Off 2:31½. Winner, H. P. Headley's b. g. (3), by Pharamond II—Volette. Trained by K. Osborne. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

WALLOPER got going rapidly, opened up a good lead rounding the turn and was taken in hand after entering the stretch. FLYING PLAID, a forward contender, was hard driven, but could not get up. WISE DEAN easily shook off the others in the last furlong. OLD SMOOTHY saved ground, but never threatened.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE HOT, $6.50, $4.70, $3.40; YANTIS, $12.90, $9.70; BELLRINGER, $5.60.

WHITE HOT broke in the air, saved ground rounding the first turn, moved into contention steadily and outgamed YANTIS in the final drive. YANTIS, going in improved form, joined the winner rounding the lower turn, but was unable to get up. BELLRINGER, rushed to the front, displayed speed, but could not keep stride with the leaders in the last quarter mile. WOODEN INDIAN closed stoutly.

MAGIC STREAM, going in his best form, gradually improved his position and outlasted PLAY HOUSE in the final drive. The latter made a bold effort after taking the lead through the stretch. WAR DECLARED outbroke the field and set a fast pace, but faltered through the stretch. DETROIT BULL moved up fast on the inside entering the stretch, but stopped in the last sixteenth. VOTUM was in much trouble.

GREAT ALBERT, cleverly rated in front while setting a fast pace, had enough in reserve to withstand BEAU JAMES' challenge. The latter moved up gamely on the outside when straightened into the stretch and was wearing the winner down, when impeded in all the way, held on well in the final drive. CLYDE TOLSON and MANY STINGS had no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Grade B Handicap. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:33⅘. Winner, Greentree Stable's br. g. CHERRY JAM followed the pace closely under restraint on the inside the first half mile, slipped through at the furlong pole and drew out in the final furlong. POTRANCO forced a fast pace, raced TIME O' WAR into defeat and held on well in the final drive while faltering. VOLITANT, prominent throughout, held on gamely in the final drive to dead heat SEA CAPTAIN for the show. SEA CAPTAIN came from far back in the last quarter mile.

Flu Cancels Columbus-Gamecocks Fights

Columbia Hit By Epidemic, Wire Says

Explorers' Saturday Night Date Was To Mark Renewal Of Boxing Relations

Maryland's boxing team will be the only local college ring squad in action this week-end, it developed yesterday as Columbus University's Saturday night date with the University of South Carolina was canceled.

Dean John R. Fitzpatrick of Columbus received a telegram from Rex Enright, director of athletics at South Carolina, suggesting that the match be called off because of an influenza epidemic in Columbia, scene of the match.

Enright's Telegram

"Influenza here has forced us to cancel football dinner tonight. Chapel meetings have been abolished. City will meet today to decide whether to close public schools. Believe it advisable to cancel any event involving crowds," Enright's telegram stated.

Thus the jinx that rode on the shoulders of the Columbus boxing team last year struck again just as the Explorers were about to renew relations with the Gamecocks after a seven-year lapse. The Explorers, with fine prospects last year, had a luckless season, winning only two out of five matches.

Maryland Fights

Maryland, lone active team this week-end, defeated South Carolina at College Park last week and Saturday takes a trip to New London, Conn., to face a stern test in a match with the Coast Guard Academy, a member of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association.

Catholic University's boxing team will not get into action until January 25 when the Lock Haven State Teachers College, Lock Haven, Pa., comes to town. Columbus will open its schedule February 1 at Turner's Arena against Arkansas Tech unless a substitute for the Gamecocks is found.

Chapman, Ferrier Victors at Miami

Miami, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP).—Without the loss of a hole, Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., the national champion, moved today into the third round of the Miami Biltmore Amateur Golf Tournament.

He ousted Skee Reigel, of Glendale, Calif., 6 and 5, to keep step with the parade of favorites.

Ernie Dusek and Milo Steinborn Meet on Mat Tonight at Arena

It's the Green Hornet, mysterious masked wrestler, shown flapping his wings ready to spring at Tommy Rae in tonight's semiwindup bout at Turner's Arena. The Hornet was disqualified last week. Headliners are Ernie Dusek and Milo Steinborn

Green Hornet Also on Card, Meeting Tommy Rae; Three Other Bouts Listed

Ernie Dusek, considered the most vicious of the Four Dusek "Riot Squad" boys, will go after the heroic Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Strong Man, tonight at Turner's Arena in an attempt to take the wrestling Ajax apart and see just what makes him tick.

Dusek and Steinborn, meeting for the first time, are scheduled for a finish match, and one of the largest crowds in months is expected to attend.

As an added incentive, Promoter Joe Turner is bringing back The Green Hornet, mysterious masked grappler, who, unheralded and unsung, made his debut last Thursday, and was disqualified in seven minutes. The Hornet was up against Steinborn, and tried to mutilate both the Strong Man and Referee Casey Berger.

The Hornet, weighing 260 pounds, standing 6-feet-4, is faster than The Golden Terror, the one-time terror of local wrestlers.

Tonight the Hornet will face Tommy Rae, of Boston, a scientific grappler, who has a big following here.

Indications are that The Hornet will get a whack at the winner of the Dusek-Steinborn bout if he clicks tonight. As for Steinborn, he already holds wins over two Dukseks—Emil and Joe. Ernie is out for revenge.

In other bouts Joe DeValteau, the French refugee who made a big hit last week holding Paul Boesch to a draw, will engage Tiger Tasker, of Alaska; Ivan Managoff will face Lou Plummer and Warren Bockwinkle returns after a month absence to engage Jim Austeri.

First match is at 8:30.

Percy Nichols put the Skeeters into the van three minutes after the opening of the third period, taking a pass from Bill McGregor, but the Eagles came back less than a minute later to tie it up again. It was Burns who tallied, with Burrage and MacBeth taking assists.

At 10:05 of the period, Russ Rossignol put in what looked like the clincher for Washington, on passes from Mike Germann and Roy McBride. The Skeeters knotted the count again, however, with less than two minutes to go, to put the game into overtime. Eddie May, on passes from McGregor and Bell, scored for the Skeeters.

Haight Goes South

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

I have a feeling I'm going fishing. I didn't exactly ask for it, but I did walk right into it. Maybe it's because my ancestors hung around the wharves waiting for their ships to come in that I'm a sucker for docks. I served a hitch in the Navy but never got outside the Delaware Breakwater and that didn't serve to cure my yen for the sea. Somehow I just can't see a boat come in or go out for that matter, and not stand around dreaming. This morning I arose with a long face and a short bankroll. After my Flagler Street 30-cent breakfast, I walked over to Biscayne Boulevard. I didn't have a nautical thought in my head until a boat whistle blew—a long and a short blast. I walked in the general direction of the sound and found myself on the wharves where practically everything connected with the sea around here begins. I saw an ocean liner pull out and then wandered over to the row of fishing boats.

HAIGHT

One of the captains opened an icebox on the back of a boat and began throwing fish up on the wharf. They were, as near as I could judge, 5-to-8-pounders—a half-dozen of them. My eyes popped. I pictured myself pulling in a couple of those babies. The captain whetted his knife on a stone and began cutting slices out of the fish. Now, Boss, there there is one great leveler of men. That is fish. One man doesn't have to know another man to talk to him about fishing. It's just a universal language. Take the snootiest fellow in the world and he won't fail to be friendly with a guy who wants to talk fish. Among strangers, I generally hang around without saying a word unless somebody makes some kind of statement that I just can't keep from contradicting. But seeing those fish just sort of set me off. "Nice looking catch you have there," I remarked rather interested like. "What these?" asked the captain, "Why, we only use these for bait."

Now Boss you know I'm something of a hardhead king around Chesapeake Bay and I always caught the first three-pound trout of the season down Colonial Beach way. And here was a guy with perfectly good-looking big fish and he was going to use them for bait. Satisfied with the sharpness of his knife, the captain began cutting strips about a foot long off the side of the fish. I started dreaming. If these were bait, then this guy must really catch some big fish. I had a mental picture of myself reeling in a big sailfish or dolphin bringing him to gaff, as Bill Ackerman would say.

Well, I will say that this captain made full use of the right moment. He didn't make any ill-timed announcement like "Season tickets for next year" when the Redskins were behind, 57-0. No sir, not this captain. I was about to be declared, in my dreams, sailfish champion of the Gulf Stream when I heard a voice, soft and mellow. It didn't exactly have sucker written all over it, but it was as full of "come on" as I have ever heard come from lips.

It must be something like it that caused Ulysses all that trouble with the mermaids. Just as if it were a product of the spray that was rising against the side of the dock came. "Mister, let's you and me go fishing?" Now, mind you, he didn't say he could make me catch a 32-pound dolphin or a record sailfish or even a barracuda. He didn't say he had the fastest boat around Miami. He didn't say what the trip would cost, when we'd start or when we'd get back. He simply rolled out seven words. I looked at him and didn't say I would and I didn't say I wouldn't, but that man knows, and you know, too, Boss, that I'm going fishing. Of course, I must wait until I hit a daily double or something, but I've decided to go, that's definite. I just can't get those lines out of my mind—"Mister, let's you and me go fishing?" Tell the truth, Boss, ain't them powerful words? Always your ace,

MIAMI HAIGHT.

Georgetown Host To N.Y.U. Tonight

Enviable Record

The Violets were rated by New Yorkers as the No. 1 team in the preseason ratings, and they did nothing to alter the ratings in eight consecutive victories over such teams as Syracuse, Manhattan, Minnesota, Illinois Wesleyan and Brooklyn, a good little team in the metropolitan area.

They bring the outstanding two-year record of any team to play here this season. The Violets will arrive at noon today and will stay at the Shoreham Hotel. They will leave immediately after the game for a week-end date with North Carolina.

George Gow will again give a play-by-play report for Station WINX, from Riverside Stadium. The Georgetown band will enliven the proceedings.

Catholic University Five Meets Terrors

Still seeking that elusive first victory, Coach Fod Cotton will send his Catholic U. courtmen against Western Maryland in a Mason-Dixon Conference game tonight at 8:30 in the Brookland gym. The Card Frosh will meet Montgomery-Blair in a preliminary at 7:30.

The Terrors have already shown here twice this season, losing to Georgetown by 12 points and beating American U. by 1 point in a conference thriller. The Terrors beat the Cards twice last season.

C. U. gave its poorest performance of the season Tuesday against St. Francis, but they may snap back tonight and give the Terrors a battle.

George Washington continues on the road tonight against Duke, while Wilson entertains Towson on the Owl court.

By the Associated Press

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 15.—The best Hal Surface, of Kansas City, had to offer wasn't good enough today and National Champion Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, won by 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, to reach the semifinals of the annual Orlando tennis tournament.

Surface, who shortly will be inducted into the Army for a year's military service, tried hard in his final winter tournament competition but was a bit too keen at the start and his forehand was ragged at times.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, second-ranking player of the country, clowned through his match with R. O. Rose, of Orlando, winning by 2—6, 6—3, 6—1. He made a belated appearance, entering two days late.

Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., defeated Norman Copeland, of Orlando, 6—0, 6—1, and Jack Kramer, of Oakland, Calif., eliminated Glenn Wilson, of Orlando, 6—0, 6—3.

Brewers, Pro Five, To Drill Today

Hog Prices Continue Rise, Hit $9 Top

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP). — Rising sharply to the best level in nearly 17 months, the hog market continued to gain today, with choice classes reaching a top price of $9 per hundred weight.

Most hog prices advanced 50 to 75 cents in fast trade. Livestock men said unfavorable traffic conditions were partly responsible for the rise. Increased buying in industrial areas stimulated by the defense program, and Army purchases, were given as another reason.

Stocks Steer Raggedly Lower Course; Chrysler Slumps on Labor Dispute

By Frederick Gardner
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Jan. 15.—The stock market took another backward step today in a listless retreat from the recent advanced new year positions. Leading issues were off fractions to more than 2 points at the close of the slowest trading in three months. Traders limited buying support, figuring the temporary trend, anyway, had swung to the decline.

Again drawing attention to the upward course of basic commodities since the launching of multi-billion dollar defense spending was a jump of 50 to 75 cents a hundredweight in hogs.

Growing employment in urban centers was held partly accountable for the climb in livestock. Most commodities actively traded imitated security markets in steering a ragged course, but exhibited undercurrents of strength.

War industry favorites backed away with the rank and file. Du Pont was marked down 2½ at 160½. Chrysler dropped 1⅛ to 68¼, apparently affected in part by report of the closing of its New Castle, Ind., plant in a work dispute.

Down fractions to more than a point were such shares as Standard Oil of New Jersey, Savage Arms, Union Pacific, Douglas Aircraft, U. S. Steel, Great Northern preferred, General Motors and Westinghouse. Inland Steel closed down 2½ at 86. Impending sale of a large block of Standard of New Jersey was reported.

Distribution of listed securities without the use of the New York Stock Exchange machinery assumed large-scale dimensions today on the disclosure of plans for selling "over-the-counter" 500,000 shares of Standard Oil of New Jersey, one of the biggest deals of its kind in recent years.

A syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Co., it was reported, prepared to offer, provided market conditions favored, the Standard of New Jersey stock after the close of the exchange tomorrow, basing the offering price on the day's final exchange quotation. The stock is worth about $18,000,000 at current quotations.

Brokerage circles in part attributed growth of over-the-counter transactions to Federal regulation of organized exchanges, which they claimed hampered erstwhile methods of selling big blocks on the exchange by exciting speculative interest.

The Standard Oil stock was reported to be for the account of a large American estate, rather than for British liquidation.

A deal was reported being worked out to offer 300,000 shares of F. W. Woolworth Co.

Another batch of 1940-'41 peaks among preferred stock, a familiar occurrence lately, was recorded as investors scanned the market for attractive yields. Consolidated Cigar prior preferred jumped 4½ to 103 and the common bulged more than a point.

Up a point or more were Associated Dry Goods second preferred, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Sugar Refining preferred and Great Western Sugar Refining preferred.

Business reports continued to picture record or near-record production in major industries, with prospects of more expansion as armament plants go into action. Iron Age said most steel producers were sold out for the first quarter.

Transactions decreased to 396,580 shares from 468,910 yesterday. A stock exchange seat sold for $301,000, off $2,000 from the previous transfer to the lowest price since 1899. Continued "over-the-counter" liquidation of British holdings was noted in offerings of 12,900 shares of American Cyanamid "B" and 40,000 shares of Brunswick Balke Collender.

For the last quarter of 1940 net income of $52,842,000 was equal to $2.83 a share, compared with $47,550,643, or $2.55 a share in the final quarter of 1939. The company said figures for December were partly estimated.

The company announced the consolidated report of the Bell System-American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its principal telephone subsidiaries—for the quarter ended November 30, 1940, showed net income applicable to stock of American Telephone & Telegraph of $55,683,014, equal to $2.98 a share, compared with $55,522,349, or $2.97 a share, in the comparable 1939 period

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., yesterday reported net earnings for 1940 of $25,584,424, equal to $2.55 a share on the combined common and class "B" common stocks. This compared with $25,645,455 of $2.56 a share for 1939.

Increased Federal income and excess profits taxes in connection with the defense program accounted for the decrease in net profits. Net sales for the year were $292,039,070 against $276,730,000 in the preceding year. Operating profit totaled $37,648,907, an increase of $2,952,792 over 1939.

61.2% Gain Seen In Machine Tool Activity Index

Cleveland, Jan. 15 (AP).—The National Machine Tool Builders' Association calculated today the busy industry's capacity, based on payroll hours, has climbed 61.2 per cent since outbreak of the European war.

The association also reported its index of operating activity, likewise figured on payroll hours, established another all-time record in December.

December operations were reckoned at 96.8 per cent of capacity. Capacity itself climbed 4 per cent over November, when operations were 95.4 per cent of that month's capacity. October operating activity, as in December, stood at 96.8 per cent of capacity, but capacity itself had increased 7 per cent by December. Thus, the association explained, December operations actually were far above October and all-time records are being established monthly. In September, 1939—first full month of European war—the industry operated at only 74.6 per cent of that period's much smaller capacity.

Steel Firms Seen Virtually Sold Out For First Quarter

New York, Jan. 15 (AP).—Iron Age said today that if mandatory priorities should be put into effect in the steel industry in the near future, it would be a result of the unrestrained buying of the past few weeks.

Neither the steel industry and its customers nor Government authorities have been anxious to have the rigid control a priority system would entail, the steel magazine said.

Meanwhile, the survey declared, defense orders are increasing in number and total volume, nearly all steel companies are sold out for the first quarter, virtually the only exception being defense requirements, which are given preference over ordinary commercial orders.

No doubt you've heard of Gypsy Rose Lee. But the question is whether you've ever actually heard Miss Lee, for various reasons—or should it be just for one reason?

Well, it seems you should hear Gypsy Rose Lee, who wasn't one born to blush unseen. For in addition to Miss Lee's widely known visual specialty, the strip-tease, of which she is the world's foremost exponent, there are stories to the effect that she is something of a literary and mental figure, too.

She has written a mystery novel—I believe it's called the "G-String Murder"—in which she pretty well stuck to the axiom that one should write about the things one knows best. And that she has a way with high-class words is shown by the quotes she gave reporters when they asked her the reason she had separated from her husband. Said Gypsy Rose: "It's one of those intangible things that go to make up incompatibility."

This all leads up to the fact that you'll be able to hear the talented Miss Lee on the radio tonight. She's to be one of the guests on Parks Johnson's and Wally Butterworth's "Vox Pop" program over WJSV and the Columbia network at 7:30 p. m. The broadcast is to come from Chicago's Palmer House, where Miss Lee is one of the entertainers at a convention of the National Association of Tobacco Distributors.

Blood Plasma 'Bank' Planned As Defense Aid

Army, Navy Surgeans General Recommend Red Cross Project

Plans for establishment of a national defense blood plasma reservoir, to be placed at the disposal of the Army and Navy, were announced yesterday by the American Red Cross.

Decision to found the "plasma bank" follows a five-month study of technical aspects conducted by the Red Cross and National Research Council. Its findings prompted Maj. Gen. James C. Magee and Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeons general of the Army and Navy, respectively, to recommend the reservoir project.

"In this cooperative effort," they informed Norman H. Davis, Red Cross chairman, "the American Red Cross is requested to secure voluntary donors in a number of the larger cities of this country, to provide the necessary equipment, to transport the drawn blood rapidly to a processing center, to arrange for separating the plasma and for storing the resulting product in refrigerated rooms."

Simultaneously, Davis announced that the Red Cross blood program for Britain would be suspended about February 1. Word has been received here that a project has been set up in England capable of meeting that nation's transfusion needs.

The District chapter reported yesterday that 21 men and women have registered as blood donors and been referred to the Army Medical Center. Volunteers may register by telephoning National 5400, branch 244.

Toland Blasts NLRB in Talk Before Rotary

Inquiry Produced 'Shocking Indictment,' Its Counsel Says

The 30-volume report of testimony taken in the recent Congressional investigation of the National Labor Relations Board is the "most shocking indictment of public officials in the history of the United States," Edward Toland, general counsel for the investigating committee, yesterday told members of the Washington Rotary Club at the Willard Hotel.

He said the report, soon to be published, contains evidence of subversive activities by board members and reveals instances of "outright corruption."

"The record of hearings which concluded last month," Toland said, "justifies the most vigorous denunciation of such actions on the part of public officials that the tongue of man can devise."

Toland spoke to some 300 Rotarians at their weekly luncheon meeting. He said 10,000,000 words of testimony were taken in the inquiry.

Instances were disclosed, he said, where employes of the NLRB were urged to visit the Russian exhibit at the New York World's Fair to see for themselves "what has been done by a really progressive country." In certain other instances, Toland related, it was suggested that board employes "might desire to become citizens of that country."

Communications between NLRB review attorneys were uncovered which indicated bias and prejudice, he charged. In one case, a notation read, he said, "Case is in the bag. Respondent will get the works."

Records of cases before the board, in at least one instance, bore the notes "nuts" and "baloney" beside the respondent's requests for exceptions, said Toland.

"I believe there was never a public official so unfit for office."
